Bowler: Jason will return

...but are we ready?

By Paul Guggina
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Seven-year-old Jason Robertson, who has AIDS-related complex, will eventually be placed in a regular classroom, Board of Education member Paul Bowler said during a board meeting Tuesday.

"This community is not going to have a choice about whether or not Jason will be placed in school," Bowler told the board.

Bowler said that either through an upcoming due-process hearing regarding Jason's placement or through a lawsuit, the boy will ultimately be returned to the classroom.

Bowler presented the board information obtained from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to support his claim. The information included published accounts of lawsuits in which other school districts have been forced to allow children with AIDS into the classroom.

"What I want to know is, what have you got planned for the community when Jason comes back to school?" Bowler asked.

With his statements, Bowler broke a silence that has surrounded Jason's case since the boy's mother, Tammy Robertson, demanded at a press conference March 14 that her son be immediately placed in a regular classroom.

When the board took no action, lawyers with the American Civil Liberties Union threatened legal action against the district, but no suit has been filed.

GRANITE CITY — Convinced that Jason Robertson will be returned to a regular classroom, school board member Paul Bowler is questioning whether the community is prepared for the consequences.

After Tuesday night's board meeting, during which he said the district could not legally keep Jason out of a regular classroom simply because he has AIDS-related complex, Bowler said the district should have an indoctrination plan ready for the 7-year-old's return.

"People have the right to know what we're going to do about it," Bowler said. "We're not going to be the only school district with this problem. It's going to be a problem of the '80s and '90s."

Bowler said Prather Elementary School students and their parents should be counseled about Jason's return before it occurs.

"I think you're going to have to take that area of the community and meet with those people one on one," he said. "The children are going to have to have it explained to them. Whatever experts there are in the field, we're going to have to get them, whether they're from the National Center for Disease Control or psychologists or sociologists."

"Those people need to be calm about the ramifications of placement of a kid with AIDS in the classroom."

Bowler predicted that, with proper preparation, the community would accept Jason.

"People in Granite City are able to adjust to anything as long as they are told up front as long as their questions and fears are calmed up front. I've seen many situations where they've rallied around an adverse situation and helped it, and I expect the same thing to happen if and when we have an AIDS child in the classroom."

Superintendent Gib Walmesley said the district has taken some steps to prepare the public in the event that Jason is admitted to a classroom with other students.

Last fall, the district held a series of meetings with parents regarding students with AIDS. But the meetings were poorly attended, Walmesley said.

In addition, the school board recently approved an AIDS curriculum for all district students, and an AIDS Awareness Week is scheduled for May.

"The saddest part of the whole thing is that most children get AIDS innocently — through a blood transfusion to save their lives," Bowler said. "They entrust their lives to be saved and, in retrospect, it cost them their lives."

Police Chief Bob Astorian

Wayward cruiser spotted

GRANITE CITY — A police car from Granite City they were seen near Grafton Tuesday night with its lights flashing was stopped by Jersey County sheriff deputies, sources report.

The unofficial trip, well outside department jurisdiction, is reported to have been part of an ongoing contest among some members of the police department to see who can push the limits the farthest.

"I can confirm that I have heard the same allegation. Because it is the subject of an internal investigation, I cannot comment on it right now," Granite City Police Chief Bob Astorian said.

"You can bet I'll get to the bottom of it."

GRANITE CITY — More than 800 Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts will kick off the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce annual cleanup campaign Saturday by picking up debris and discarded items from curbs, sidewalks and parks in the Quad City area.

The Scouts will be joined by other youth groups who plan to be out in force Saturday, or work one day next week, Mary Brown, chairman of the Chamber Community Betterment Committee, said.

Fireman injured, house lost in fire

GRANITE CITY — A fire Tuesday at 2620 Pine St. destroyed a house and garage and resulted in the injury of a Granite City fireman.

Capt. Don Brown was treated at the St. Elizabeth Medical Center emergency room for first and second degree burns to the hands, neck, feet and knees. He was not admitted.

Brown is expected to return to work in a few days, Granite City Fire Chief Joe Holder said.

The fire, reported at 12:27 p.m., is believed to have started in the garage and spread to the home. Firemen from Granite City and Long Lake responded to the alarm and battled the blaze for more than 2½ hours.

Damage is expected to exceed $50,000, including the building and contents.

Prom arrangement angers some

By Paul Guggina
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — High school principal Ken Spalding created a minor stir when he announced that juniors would be allowed to attend this year's prom, but district officials say they expect the dance to proceed without a hitch.

The prom, scheduled for April 30 at the Pipefitters' Hall in St. Louis, was originally intended to be for all seniors who wished to attend and a limited number of juniors, depending on how many tickets were left over after the seniors got their share.

When an unexpectedly large number of seniors bought tickets, it appeared there was no room left for the 100 or so juniors who had placed their names on a waiting list for the tickets.

But Spalding, after learning that many of the juniors had purchased dresses and made other arrangements for their attendance, later announced that all the juniors whose names were on the waiting list would be allowed to attend. As a result, a pair of decorative gazebos at the hall may have to be removed to make room for the extra students.

"I've had some seniors complaining," Spalding said. "That happens whenever you're given these kinds of situations. But I haven't heard any real legitimate complaints."

Superintendent Gib Walmesley said two parents also complained about the situation, and the Press-Record/Journal received an anonymous letter from a "fed-up parent."

"If the juniors want to attend prom," the parent stated, "then there should be a junior prom held at the school gym for them.... But why can't they wait four years for their prom, just like the majority of the seniors did?"

The students themselves don't share that opinion, said Grant Abernethy, the student body president.

"Most of the people are happy about it," Abernethy said. "At first there were a few that were sort of mad, but not really anymore."

The student council, which finances the prom and handles ticket sales, voted to make next year's prom strictly for seniors, Abernethy said.

But in the meantime, the council will have to pay for any changes made at the Pipefitters' Hall. The removal of the two gazebos would cost $800, Walmesley said.

Steve Hamilton, the council's advisor, said the gazebos will probably be removed to accommodate the juniors.

"No decisions have been made," Hamilton said. "But if I don't think we'll take them down, I'd say we will."

Madison schools forced to borrow

Madison not alone in red

SPRINGFIELD — The Madison School District, which will borrow up to $447,000 in tax anticipation warrants to meet ordinary expenses this year, is not the only one in dire financial straits.

Nearly 88 percent of the school districts responding to a State Board of Education survey indicated expenditures would exceed revenues for the current school year, and 46.6 percent indicated they expect to borrow to cover those deficits.

Things apparently will get worse before they get better — more than half of the districts responding said they believe they will be forced to lay off teachers and borrow money to operate during the 1988-89 school year.

State Superintendent of Education Ted Sanders said 59 percent of the districts indicated they would probably reduce teaching staff positions and nearly 54 percent reported they anticipate borrowing money to meet operating expenses for the next school year.

Just over 88 percent of the 669 respondents (of 981 districts statewide) reported their 1988-89 expenditures would exceed revenues.

"The results of this survey confirm what we already know — the state must provide more revenue for our local elementary and secondary schools," Sanders said.

"The state's financial problems are eroding local schools' effort to provide our children with high-quality educational opportunities. Without a state tax increase, our children and our future will suffer the consequences of larger class sizes, fewer course offerings and diminishing supplies of textbooks and other materials."

Nearly 64 percent of the school systems said they will MADISON — With no money left in its reserves, the Board of Education is borrowing $447,000 in tax anticipation warrants to meet day-to-day expenses.

The school district has been operating at a deficit for several years, and now the trend is taking its toll, Superintendent Daniel Kostenecki said.

"We had a (contingency) fund balance of over $2 million, but over the course of the last five years we've whittled into that the point where, now, we're operating directly on the receipts that come in," Kostenecki said.

"Ultimately, we have to balance the budget."

— Dan Kostenecki

He said this is the first year he knows of in which the school board has had to borrow in order to meet ordinary operating expenses.

The loan, which the board approved at its April 7 meeting, will be repaid with the district's property tax receipts later this year, he said.

Since the district relies on state and federal funds for about 80 percent of its operating budget, it was especially hurt by recent cuts in state funding projections.

"We are a state-aid district, and the fact that the state is not doing much for us compounds the situation," Kostenecki said. "We are drastically underfunded."

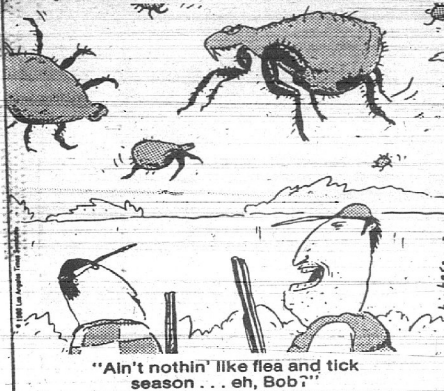

Kostenecki said he is trying to find ways to improve the financial outlook, but a tax increase is not an option.

Since less than one-fifth of the district's revenues are from local property taxes, it would take a substantial tax increase hike to make a noticeable difference, he said. In addition, the majority of Madison voters do not have school-age children and might not support an increase, he said.

State and federal grants may ease the burden next year, Kostenecki said, but the district will eventually have to curtail spending.

"Ultimately, we have to balance the budget," Kostenecki said, but declined to specify which areas would be cut.

Auto interiors shop approved

MADISON — The City Council on April 5 approved a special use zoning permit applied for by Alderman Andy Economy to operate an automobile interiors workshop and scrap yard at 1329 Iowa St. Economy abstained on the vote.

Aldermen also heard a complaint from Alderman John Hamm III about the time he alleges Campbell Ambulance Service is taking to respond to calls. The city contracts for the emergency service. Mayor John Bellhoff said he would ask a representative of Campbell to appear before the City Council at its next meeting.

After the regular meeting, the council discussed finances in executive session. Afterward, Alderman Ron Gryzwacz said the group discussed the possibility of "one or two departments" spending more than budgeted so far this year.

The Finance Committee will meet to discuss contingency plans.

Dinner dance for benefit of Quad Cities' museum

"Help Preserve our Community's Heritage — Support Your Museum" is the theme of the third annual spring dinner-dance and silent auction sponsored by the Old Six Mile Historical Society. The event will be Saturday, April 30, at the Knights of Columbus Hall, according to Marguerite Lenow, society president.

Shirley Adams, general chairman of the event, said this year's dinner will mark a "concerted effort to make the public aware of the serious need for area residents to understand the function of the historical society and the financial needs of the museum," the Emmert Zippel House, 3279 Maryville Road at Emert Avenue, near Stratford Lane, Granite City.

The society represents the townships of Chouteau, Granite City, Nameoki and Venice, and "we are seeking residents of those areas to visit the museum, join the society, volunteer when possible for tours and help maintain the museum grounds," Adams said.

Many repairs must be completed to the interior and exterior of the house before it can be named a "historic site" by national and Illinois officials, she said. In addition, sewer lines must be installed on the property, which still has a mortgage balance of $25,500.

Shirley Adams
Helping museum

State Rep. Sam Wolf, this year's honorary chairman, will speak briefly at the dinner about those needs.

With yellow and white streamers and green foliage throughout the room, the event will begin at 5:30 p.m. with cocktails (cash bar), a "silent auction" that will include nearly $1,000 in merchandise, and the sale of home-made baked items.

A buffet dinner will be served promptly at 6:30 p.m., catered by Ravanelli's Restaurant. Exceeding the dinner, Beverly Scroggins will sing the national anthem, representatives of the Uniwah Boy Scout District will present the American flag and Marguerite Barker will give the invocation.

Entertainment for the evening will include fashions of antique clothes from area families. Valerie Stevens will be the piano accompanist.

There will be several dance selections by students of The Dance Studio of Granite City. Tami Pollack, director, will perform a solo. She has danced professionally for 20 years and has studied at the Joffrey School of Ballet in New York.

Scroggins and George Cochran will sing a medley of songs from the 1960s musical, "I Do, I Do," a story of two people reminiscing about 50 years of marriage. The singers are members of the "Summer-Stage" theater group and will be accompanied at the piano by Zafra Perryman.

"The Good News Messengers" will furnish music throughout the auction and dinner, featuring show tunes.

John Fornaszewski's orchestra will provide music for dancing for the remainder of the evening.

During the first intermission, the Steam Heat Dancers, cheerleaders for the St. Louis Steamers soccer team, will appear under the direction of Rusty Herman of St. Louis. Steam Heat posters will be available.

The event is open to the public and tickets are $10.50 for adults and $7.50 for children, 12 years and younger.

Tickets can be purchased at Tops and Bottoms Shop, 19th and State streets, 876-7892, or by calling Marguerite Lenow at 931-0479 or Georgia Engelle, ticket chairman and museum curator, at 931-3023.

Reservations should be made as soon as possible, since tickets are limited, a spokesman said.

Those wishing to become a member of the society and/or to make a contribution to the museum may call any of the above telephone numbers.

Tours of the museum will be conducted each Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. starting May 21 and continuing until Christmas. Private tours of groups of 10 or more can be arranged by calling Engelle.

Tax increase idea drawing some friends

CAHOKIA — Alumni associations from Illinois colleges are cooperating on an income tax increase proposal.

"We're here to show our concern for the plight of education in Illinois," said Bill Mueller, president of the Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville Alumni Association. "We're urging our alumni to contact their legislators and ask them to support an increase in taxes for education."

Mueller and six other alumni heads were at St. Louis Downtown Parks Airport on April 5 to draw media attention to the effort. The group made stops in Chicago, Peoria, Springfield and Carbondale.

Man friend of literacy

GRANITE CITY — A group of 15 Prather Elementary School students heard an original story, "The Blue Cat," told in their cafeteria by its author, Jim Heaton.

Heaton invented the tale and relayed it to the children during the first of a storytelling series he introduced at Prather.

Several times weekly, Heaton, a librarian at St. Louis Area Army Support Center, tells stories to children in the Prather cafeteria before school.

Commissioner quits

GRANITE CITY — Mayor Von Dee Cruse said last week he is sorry President Bruce Groshong and Secretary Linda Irwin will quit the Police and Fire Commission, but said they are doing what they think is right.

"They have assured me that the board is set up so that whoever comes on next will be able to just walk in and take over with no problem," Cruse said. "I really hate to see them go — they've done a fine job and done a lot of work putting the new rules and testing programs together."

However, following the report it was learned that Irwin decided to withdraw her resignation and to continue her service.

Alderman ticketed

GRANITE CITY — City Inspector Ervin DeRousse issued a ticket to a junk to 5th Ward Alderman Lloyd Bailey.

"Wednesday I issued a ticket to Roscoe Terry — Lloyd's biggest complaint in the newspaper story — and Roscoe asked for more time. I told him there was just no way I could give it to him. Then he told me Lloyd's yard was full of junk and that was what he planned to tell the judge," DeRousse said.

"Thursday I went to Lloyd's house to pick up his 15-page list of violators. His yard wasn't in the best of shape and I told him so."

"If you're in violation you're in violation, and I figured Roscoe Terry was correct. I didn't give Roscoe time, so that's the way it's going to be. They know they are in violation."

"So I gave Lloyd a ticket."

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

An increasing number of parents throughout the country have expressed a desire to educate their children at home. In some cases, this has resulted from a dissatisfaction with the public schools. In other cases, this desire for home education has stemmed from religious convictions. Many Christian parents nationwide have put their children out of public schools and have begun a home education program. In some cases, this has resulted in prosecution, with Courts reaching varying results from state to state.

In Illinois, any person who has custody of a child between the ages of 7 and 16 has a responsibility to make sure the child attends some public school in the district where he or she resides. One exception to this requirement is where a child attends a private or parochial school where "children are taught the basics of education taught to children of corresponding age and grade in the public schools." The question in cases involving home education is whether the child is in fact attending a "private school" within the meaning of the law.

The landmark case in this State regarding home education was decided more than 35 years ago. In this situation, the parents of a seven year old girl were prosecuted in Greene County for violating the compulsory school attendance law. The parents were Seventh Day Adventists in their religious beliefs and believed that their child should not be educated in competition with other children because it did not produce the necessary atmosphere for faith in the Bible. In this case, the father was a college graduate and a minister in his religion, and the mother had two years of college.

The evidence presented showed that the child would be in the third grade if she went to public school and that her mother spent five hours per day teaching her third-grade work at home. The parents also showed that the child had regular hours for study and recitation and that she was performing in her various subject areas at a third-grade level. Here the Court decided that the parents were providing a "private school" for their child by educating her at home since there was nothing from the evidence to indicate that her education was in any way being neglected. The Court felt that the child's education was equal or superior to that obtainable in the public schools.

WISH COMES TRUE. Ten-year old Steven Shell's greatest wish was granted Sunday when he took a ride in Bear Foot, the monster truck (looming overhead), met its owner, Fred Shafer, Pontoon Beach, left, and visited with Shafer's pet bears, Sugar and Spice. Steven has leukemia and came here with his family from Gladwin, Mich., through the Make A Wish Foundation of Michigan, which grants the wishes of seriously ill youngsters. Steven chose to spend a day with Shafer and Bear Foot rather than a week at Disney World.

PONTOON BEACH — Steven Shell will not forget Sunday, April 10. His deepest wish to see the monster truck Bear Foot in action and meet its owner, Fred Shafer, came true.

Even more, he got to ride around in the 15,000-pound truck.

Make A Wish Foundation of Michigan sponsored a visit here by Steven, a leukemia victim, his parents and brother and sister, after the boy sent magazine clippings of Bear Foot to the group asking that his greatest wish to see the truck be granted.

"He seemed almost afraid to ask for a ride, as if it was something he couldn't possibly expect,"

Marta Hepler Draha of Make A Wish said to Shafer.

Steven not only got a ride, but saw Bear Foot V crush a car and visited with Sugar and Spice, two American black bears Shafer used to ride around in the truck before they grew to nearly 7 feet tall and 500 pounds in weight.

"I believe he had a really good time," Det. Sgt. Mike Crouch said Tuesday. Crouch escorted Steven in a squad car from the motel to Shafer's home on Illinois 111.

Shafer also entertained Steven, his family and some friends at dinner Sunday.

Steven was a special guest of the St. Louis Cardinals at Monday night's baseball game and visited the Gateway Arch before the family returned to Michigan.

Interstate crash

GOES UNDER TRUCK. Eric C. Martin, 21, and a passenger, Charles W. Moore, 22, both of St. Louis, sustained injuries and went to St. Elizabeth Medical Center by ambulance at 4 p.m. April 7. Martin's car, in the foreground, was westbound on Interstate 270 at Illinois 203; he allegedly was trying to squeeze by another westbound auto and a tractor-trailer truck. The right front side of Martin's car went underneath the left side of the truck's flatbed trailer, Illinois State Police said. Martin was charged with driving without a valid driver license, failing to reduce speed to avoid an accident, and improper lane usage. Truck driver Dwight Gene Lehey, 34, Greenfield, Iowa, was not hurt. Mitchell volunteer firemen assisted at the accident scene.

Ephesians 1:3 . . . "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings . . ."

The Apostle Paul is saying that God has already blessed us. Past tense. And that he has blessed us with all spiritual blessings. Everything we could possibly hope for has already been given to us. This revelation can change your entire approach to God. Instead of spending countless hours in prayer asking God to give us something he has already given us, we can ask him to teach us how to receive his manifold blessings.

A good way to start changing our attitude is to start praising God for what he has done. Delight yourself in the Lord and he will give you the desires of your heart. Do it, Today.

10 deaths blamed on lack of home smoke detectors

SPRINGFIELD — At least 10 deaths caused by apparent smoke inhalation in the past month in Illinois could have been prevented, State Fire Marshal Thomas Bestudik says.

"Six of those persons were not protected by any smoke detector," Bestudik noted. "The other four had smoke detectors installed but they were not working."

The deaths occurred in six different counties. Those who perished ranged in age from five months to 81 years; five were seven years old or younger.

"Smoke detectors do not prevent fires or suppress them," Bestudik said. "But working smoke detectors give occupants precious seconds to get out of the burning area and into fresh air."

Illinois has a smoke detector law which requires a smoke detector to be installed within 15 feet of every room used for sleeping purposes. The law requires detectors in all dwellings after July 1, 1988.

"As the governor said when he signed the law," Bestudik said, "there will not be a house-to-house canvass. I suggest, however, that when a fire occurs, the fire department does not have a working smoke detector, Illinoisans will discover that the law will be enforced and that penalties will be assessed."

Ronald L. Grieve, 22, 4008 Kirkpatrick Homes, was booked for battery following an April 8 disturbance at the apartment of Gene C. Leigible, 36, 305 Kirkpatrick Homes. He suffered a large cut on his nose and an 8-inch slash to the lower back, both requiring suturing. He was bleeding from both ears and his face was swollen and bruised.

Green vs. Telegraph libel case topic of book

At 10:10 p.m. on June 3, 1980, in a courtroom in Granite City, a Madison County jury returned a verdict of $9.2 million in damages in a libel lawsuit against the Alton Telegraph and two of its reporters.

It was the biggest libel judgment awarded by a jury against a newspaper in U.S. history, a record that still stands, even though it was later wiped out in exchange for a $1.4 million settlement.

It was a peculiar libel case, resulting from an unpublished "confidential memo" two Telegraph reporters had signed in 1959 and sent to an official of the U.S. Justice Department.

They said they were passing on tips they had received from local sources alleging possible criminal involvement in the substantial loans made by Madison County's biggest savings and loan, Piasa Federal Savings and Loan in Alton, to the county's biggest builder, James C. Green of Granite City.

Between the writing of the memo and the filing of the libel lawsuit, both Piasa and Green had suffered financial collapse.

After the awarding of the verdict in 1980, the Telegraph, founded in 1836, also appeared to be facing extinction for a time.

In "Coals of Fire: The Alton Telegraph Libel Case," recently published by Southern Illinois University Press, University of Illinois journalism professor Thomas B. Littlewood has provided the first detailed, behind-the-scenes chronicle of the peculiar case and the peculiar Madison County court system with its national reputation as a "plaintiff's paradise."

Before joining the faculty of the University of Illinois, Littlewood was a Springfield and Washington reporter for the Chicago Sun-Times for several years.

He is the author of one of the best books ever written on Illinois politics, the unfortunately long-out-of-print biography of Depression-era Illinois Gov. Henry Horner.

First, an explanation of the Coals of Fire title. It is taken from a quote in the 75th anniversary issue of the Telegraph:

"Every newspaper sees its defeats and its victories, and the wise newspaperman has learned not to gloat over his fallen adversary for the fallen may rise to wreak vengeance, either with coals of fire or vindictive measures."

Littlewood conducted hundreds of interviews and poured through thousands of pages of legal documents in researching the book on the Telegraph case.

Yet he avoids letting the complexity of the legal and financial details overwhelm the reader with descriptions of the people involved and larger questions of the role of newspapers and the public's attitude toward them.

The libel case also pitted families against each other, Littlewood notes, poignantly describing the deterioration of the once close relationship between the Cousey family, majority owners of the Telegraph for nearly a century, and the Pfeiffer family that had founded Piasa.

Both families had attended First Presbyterian Church in Alton for generations.

Yet, one Sunday, when the Rev. Courtney Burroughs noted briefly in his announcements that Telegraph publisher Paul S. Cousey had received a national journalism award in connection with the libel case, Marty Pfeifferberger angrily walked out of church, Littlewood recounts.

Littlewood also looks at the larger context of the jury's stunning verdict, such as the historically deep social and political chasm between the Alton and Granite City areas.

He also examines in detail the interlocking relationships in Madison County between businessmen, labor unions, prominent plaintiffs' lawyers and politicians.

The book also contains a mini-history of the Telegraph leading up to the bitter feuding between the Cousey family and the minority shareholder McAdams family that finally led to the sale of the newspaper to Ingersoll Publications of New Jersey in 1985.

Littlewood traces the change in the Telegraph from a fairly typical small-town newspaper to one in the 1960s and 1970s that "reported the news of the community and the region with a vigor — at times a hell-raising vigor — uncommon for a paper of its size."

Littlewood noted the Telegraph had a larger news staff and percentage of space devoted to news, and smaller profits, than most other newspapers of its size around the country.

The vigorous investigative reporting in that era was spurred by city editor Elmer Broz (who died in 1976). Littlewood said Broz "assembled a staff of activist reporters who wanted to make a difference."

He was ahead of his time deploying reporters to cover news of consumer problems, environmental issues and regulation of public utilities, all from the point of view of the readers and not the commercial interests involved," Littlewood writes of Broz.

The aggressive, muckraking style of reporting encouraged by Broz also made the newspaper enemies in the community, however, particularly among businessmen and politicians, who criticized the "negative" coverage, Littlewood notes.

But the year in which the later famous memo was written was journalistically a benchmark for the Telegraph.

Reporters Ed Pound and Ande Yukstis had been between Illini and the FHLBB, without mentioning the memo.

The libel trial judge, Charles Chapman, had barred Telegraph lawyers from citing contradictory arguments made by Carr in the earlier case, as well as other evidence they considered key to the newspaper's defense, Littlewood notes.

He colorfully describes how the brilliant theatrics of Carr during the Telegraph trial impressed jurors, such as Carr's claims that a hostile witness was being "signaled" how to answer.

He also notes Green and DeGrand scored with jurors while Melosi, Paul S. Cousey and an FHLBB official did not.

Littlewood's interviews with the jurors in the case are particularly fascinating, including the revelation that some of them were under the impression the punitive damages they awarded would "go to the school district" (in fact they would go to Green and Carr).

After the verdict, the Telegraph owners engaged in a futile effort to appeal.

They were unable to raise the $13.8 million appeal bond and went into Chapter 11 federal bankruptcy protection to prevent Green and Carr from seizing the newspaper in the meantime.

In June 1983, with a headline in another newspaper saying the Telegraph "faces death," a settlement was reached in which Green accepted $1.4 million, of which $1 million was paid by the Telegraph's libel insurance carrier.

The newspaper's legal bills had come to more than $600,000, Littlewood reported, "an enormous sum" for a business with an annual profit of $200,000 to $300,000.

Meanwhile, in a settlement of other lawsuits involving Illini and FHLBB, Green's apartment complexes were returned to him, and in turn sold to a West Coast company under a tax-shelter arrangement.

Littlewood quotes Carr as saying he would realize at least $3 million from the deal and Green $6 million.

Littlewood concludes his chronicle of the case with some reflections on what he considers a trend away from the "hell-raising" journalism the Telegraph had practiced.

He attributes it partly to the wave of libel verdicts and partly to the increasing domination of large corporate chains that emphasize bottom line profits.

"Maybe the courageous home-owned watchdog/newspaper that digs into government news because the people need to know is or soon will be extinct," Littlewood writes in the closing chapter of Coals of Fire.

Every newspaper sees its defeats and its victories, and the wise newspaperman has learned not to gloat over his fallen adversary for the fallen may rise to wreak vengeance, either with coals of fire or vindictive measures.

nominated for a Pulitzer Prize for breaking stories on how two Illinois Supreme Court justices, who subsequently resigned, had received gifts of stock from a bank with a case before the court.

The memo relating to Piasa and Green was signed by reporters Bill Lhotka and Joe Melosi.

Later, they would write stories published in the paper of how Piasa was taken over by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (FHLBB) and merged with Illini Federal Savings and Loan of Fairview Heights.

It was Robert DeGrand, who had been the chief operating officer of Piasa and was primarily responsible for making millions of dollars in loans to Green, who would eventually learn of the memo and file the first libel suit in 1975, despite legal questions over whether the one-year statute of limitations under Illinois law had run out.

Ironically, the bitter DeGrand's case never came to trial, but Green had the good fortune to get East St. Louis superlawyer Rex Carr to represent him in exchange for a share of his company, which had built hundreds of apartments around Madison County with Piasa loans.

Littlewood traces what a judge called the "Odyssey" legal effort conducted in several state and federal courts by Carr to recover property Green had lost through foreclosures by Illini.

Before the Telegraph case came to trial, in 1979 Green had won a $3 million verdict against Illini for spending a night in the Madison County Jail over Illini's unsubstantiated allegation he had been skimming rent money from apartment tenants.

Littlewood reports how Carr had blamed Green's business problems in that trial on a conspiracy

DUI

Police station struggle follows arrest for DUI

George M. Barker, 33, 3523 Illinois 111, was booked on six charges, including driving under the influence of alcohol, at 4:05 a.m. April 9.

An officer reported seeing a pickup truck pass a stop sign at 22nd Street and Washington Avenue and halted the driver. At police headquarters, Barker allegedly declined to take a breathalyzer test and — while being booked for DUI, driving while his license was revoked and running a stop sign — he was unable to find his wallet.

Barker allegedly accused a patrolman of taking the wallet, called the officer a liar and doubled up his fist. During efforts to put him into the cell block, the man allegedly drove at one officer's legs and tried to pull him to the floor. A struggle ensued, with Barker then placed in a cell; the prescription eyeglasses of Patrolman Michael Gutsch were broken.

Barker was additionally charged with resisting arrest, battery and criminal damage to property.

Lost In This Space

By Andy Sierling

The Sixties... they're back!

In solidarity with the Hollywood writers, there will be no column in this space this week. Just kidding, ha-ha.

But that would be a very '60s thing to do, and that's what the column is about this week: the return of the '60s. "How Learned to Stop Worrying and Let My Gray Hair Down."

It started five years ago with the movie "The Big Chill," accelerated with the popularity of TV reruns like "Leave It to Beaver," "The Twilight Zone," and "The Munsters."

Then they brought back the mini-skirt. Things were really looking up.

Now there's talk of a Beatles reunion, and Roy Orbison and Little Richard are making comebacks. "Classic rock" radio stations are proliferating nationwide. Longer hair is making a comeback.

What's next? Free love? Probably not, thanks to AIDS.

Marketing experts are predicting the rehash will last at least another year, culminating in 1989 with the 20th anniversary of the Woodstock music festival.

I have no major objections to any of this, but I'm puzzled by the explanations pundits are putting forth for it.

Punditry is a wonderful thing. It keeps people employed who would otherwise have to work for a living. Somebody once defined a pundit as a person who uses your watch to tell you what time it is and charges you for the information. A pundit does it for free, but he doesn't give you your watch back.

Anyway, the pundits have come up with some knee-deep explanations. In this quote, from Todd Gitlin, a sociologist at the University of California at Berkeley and author of "The '60s, Years of Hope, Days of Rage":

"Part of the reason we can't let go of the '60s is that they brought to the surface a welter of feelings and visions and inclinations that have been at war with each other ever since and have not been settled."

"Therefore, talking about the '60s is an indirect way of talking about where we are now in the culture and politics."

Gitlin and others are suggesting it has something to do with a yen for liberalism after a long stretch of conservatism. But I think the pundits are making the explanation more complicated than it needs to be. It's really much simpler.

The leading edge of the Baby Boom turns 40 this year — the Baby Boom, that giant lump moving through the snake of American demographics which has been dictating for years what the rest of you will read, watch, wear and listen to.

Yes, the Baby Boomers are turning middle-aged. They don't like it much either, so the first thing they did about it was to redefine "middle age," which is now considered to begin about 45 or 50, rather than 35 or 40, as it used to.

This nostalgia for the '60s is nothing but the Boom's longing for its lost youth. Thanks to their numerical superiority, the Boomers have always dictated what's in style. Now that the older Boomers have reached the age when they are in charge of things, they're pulling everybody else into their nostalgia trip. (Trip now there's a '60s word!)

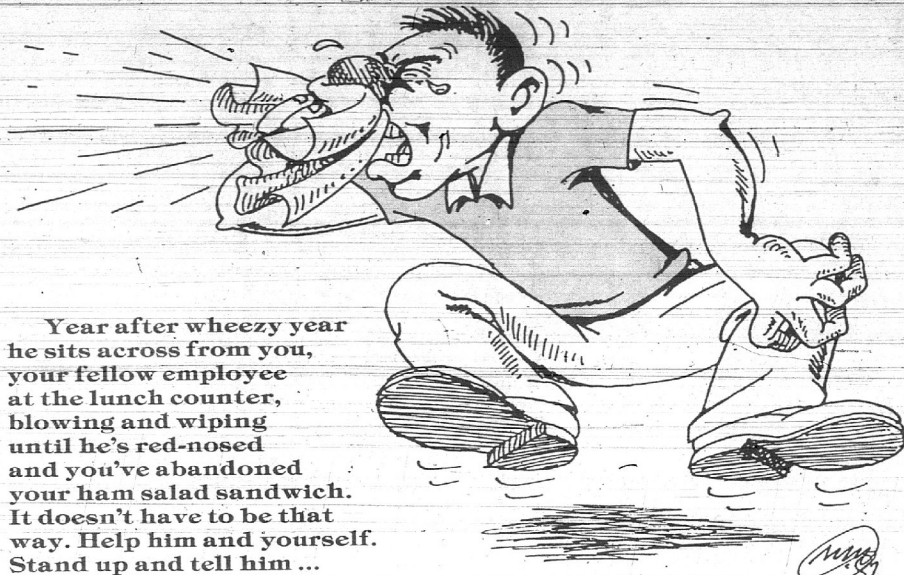

You're going to see a lot of people with the middle-agedies in the next year or two. It may be pathetic, but it can't be helped. And get ready to hear about Woodstock until you puke paiste.

All this is pretty familiar to me, because I'm Class of '65. I turned 40 this year, and it is with some discomfort that I admit that it seems terribly unnatural. When did this happen? I'm still trying to figure out what I want to be when I grow up!

I was tickled by something that happened the other day. I stopped to buy a six-pack on my way to a party, and the lady at the store asked to see my I.D. I was sure she was joking.

She was serious. "Turn backward, backward, O time in thy flight!"

I showed her my driver's license and she loved her laughter when she saw my date of birth. I drove away, whistling. I guess I should have left her a tip. After all, she had made my day. But I feel bad about one thing. I wish I hadn't run over her seeing eye dog on the way out of the parking lot.

Year after wheezy year he sits across from you, your fellow employee at the lunch counter, blowing and wiping until he's red-nosed and you've abandoned your ham salad sandwich. It doesn't have to be that way. Help him and yourself. Stand up and tell him ...

Oh, gross! Get some help

By Andy Sierling Staff writer

There's a whole lot of sneezing going on. It's hay fever season.

Do you get a cold every year about this time, a cold that hangs on for weeks, even months? You may not have a cold. You may have an allergy.

Colds are caused by viruses and last only seven to 10 days. Hay fever can last weeks or even months, depending on which pollen or pollens you're allergic to.

"Hay fever" is actually "allergic rhinitis" — an allergic reaction to inhaling the pollen of trees and grasses, called "allergens." About 15 million people spend part or all of the mild seasons sniffing, sneezing and dabbing hankies at their bleary eyes.

An additional nine million have either allergic or non-allergic asthma, which is an obstruction of air flow in the lungs. Millions more experience a variety of allergic reactions to specific foods, food additives, and drugs such as penicillin.

Most of those people are suffering needlessly, said an allergy specialist at St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

"There are very few people who can't be helped," said Dr. Barry Zeffren, who has an office in Granite City.

Tree pollen and mold spores start in March. Tree season runs until late May, mold until the first frost. Zeffren said the St. Louis area is one of the worst in the country for mold. The grass season starts in mid-May and runs until late June. Ragweed starts in August and continues into October.

Some people are allergic to virtually all the pollens, others to several. If your "cold" hangs around from spring until the first frost, there's a high probability you are poly-allergic.

"If you're allergic to one of the outdoor pollens, there's a good chance you will be allergic to another," Zeffren said.

Many people are allergic to animal dander from domestic pets (dried flecks of skin) or dust mites in the home.

Zeffren said the cost of treatment varies greatly from case to case. But he said it is covered to some extent by most insurance plans and HMOs.

Zeffren said treatment for allergies is three-pronged. The first is environmental. If you are allergic to cat dander, for example, the solution is simply to stay away from cats.

Some people try the same strategy with their pollen allergies. Say you're allergic to oak pollen. Before you go moving to Colorado to get away from oak pollen, you should know there's a strong chance you will be allergic to something there, perhaps red cedars. Most people with allergies tend to be allergic to more than one thing.

The old myth that everybody who visits an allergist leaves with a shot is no longer true.

"I may take you a few years," said Zeffren, "but you will probably develop an allergy to something else."

The second prong consists of a number of new and improved prescription drugs — antihistamines, decongestants and steroids — to control the symptoms.

The third prong is a series of sub-cutaneous (under the skin) injections with a derivative of the substance to which you are allergic. The process is similar to immunization and works by building up the body's tolerance for specific allergens.

Years ago, said Zeffren, the desensitization (See ALLERGY Page 10A)

A-choo-sy public invited to forum

Dr. Barry Zeffren, an allergist on the staff of St. Elizabeth Medical Center, will conduct a community forum on asthma and allergies April 28 at SEMC's Going Strong Wellness Center, 2103 Iowa St.

The forum is sponsored by the center, in cooperation with the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America.

Zeffren provided this allergy checklist. If you have any of these symptoms, you may have an allergy and could benefit from the forum.

Do you sneeze, develop an itchy nose and get watery nasal discharge at the same time of the year, every year?

Do your eyes water and itch at certain times of the year?

Do you get an itchy palate?

Do you develop a spring or summer "cold" at the same time every year?

Do you cough, wheeze or become short of breath at certain times of the year or following exercise — particularly in cold air?

Do your symptoms become worse in the presence of pets, dust, grass or trees?

Do your symptoms improve in a new location, on trips out of town or with the use of allergy medications?

Children's curiosity can be channeled

By Jane Cosby
Staff affiliate

Very young children, from birth through toddlerhood, are perfect scientists. Their curiosity is insatiable; they examine everything. As soon as they start talking, they ask limitless questions.

As troublesome as these behaviors can be to parents, these are the behaviors that lead to discovery and learning. The great scientists of the world never lost their curiosity or their desire to examine and question.

Unfortunately, in the process of socializing our children, we often squelch those early learning skills.

Developing these "scientific" qualities in children requires a different technique than the ones we use to teach our children to dress themselves or to eat properly.

In this case we really are trying to preserve a characteristic that our children already have, not develop a new skill. For this reason, we look to our children to guide us.

Spend time looking at things through your child's perspective. Take a toddler outside and watch how he examines everything, from the grass, flowers, sticks, rocks and trees to the litter found on the ground. He feels the wind; hears birds, planes and cars; tastes anything we let him put in his mouth and, in general, experiences his environment in a way adults have forgotten.

This is the time for you to imitate him, not vice versa. In this instance, he is the "expert," so follow his lead.

With older children who are less inclined to initiate such experiences, you might have to lead the way. Look for areas in which your child expresses an interest, and then together expand your knowledge of that subject. Also look for the moments when your child wants to learn; don't force feed this kind of discovery.

Curiosity is a sign of intelligence. Encourage your child to be curious and investigate the objects of his curiosity whenever possible.

Don't be afraid of questions you can't answer or subjects of which you yourself are ignorant. No one, regardless of intelligence or education, is knowledgeable on every subject. Your children will learn this sooner or later anyway, so don't ever pretend to be the final authority on everything.

One of the true delights of children is the opportunity they afford for parents to learn along with them. Teach your children not to be ashamed of their ignorance, but use it as motivation to learn.

Observation, one of the principal tools of scientific inquiry, is not a simple skill. Teach your children to take notice of the world around them. Look for size, color, shape and texture. Listen for pitch, duration and volume. When tasting something, notice whether it is sweet, sour, salty or bland.

Examine the density of objects. Are they solid, hollow, porous or spongy? Look at motion. Is it fast, slow, smooth, jerky, continuous or intermittent?

When observing events, discuss concepts of time: minutes, seconds, hours, days, weeks and seasons.

Look for changes in positions, like the sun, moon and stars. Notice growth or death as a change.

Make comparisons between objects. Are they alike or different and in what ways?

Teach your child to describe what he is observing. Part of being able to describe something is measuring it or counting it. In addition to measuring height, width and length, there also is depth, volume and temperature.

Learn the proper scientific labels for things.

The purpose of this type of activity is not to turn your children into the next Albert Einstein. It is to help them retain the wonder of the world they were born with and to keep those first learning skills operating as a basis for future discovery.

City Republican Women review primary results

The Granite City Republican Women's Club held a luncheon meeting March 26 at Jerry's Restaurant.

The meeting was called to order by President Vernice Walter, and Americanism Chairman Leona Bell held opening ceremonies with an Easter prayer.

The group discussed the results of the Illinois primary election. Florence Stewart, Emma Schoen and Leona Bell were poll judges.

Plans for the April 18 annual meeting of the Madison County Republican Women's Club, were completed. County President Donna Graham, Collinsville, has invited county and district candidates to provide the program. The meeting will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Jerry's Restaurant.

Lunch is by reservation by April 14, call 276-5748. In other business, Louise Thompson turned in an affidavit for Hospice. Irma Taylor announced upcoming events for "Old Six Mile."

Walter thanked Secretary Gladys Pape, Treasurer Virginia Segar and telephone Chairman Verna Michel for their dedication and closed the meeting with this John Milton quote, "None can love freedom, but good men. The rest love not freedom but license."

Daughters initiate 4

Initiated March 8 into Bethel 43 of Granite City, International Order of Job's Daughters, were Tonya Campbell, Laura Patton, Rachel Roe and Dena Withers.

The meeting was presided over by Vickie Becker, honored queen, under the direction of Bethel Guardian Kathleen Off and Associate Bethel Guardian Dale O'Bear.

The Daughters discussed plans to attend a Grand Session in Decatur, April 21-24. They also planned a salad luncheon and to perform the Cross for the White Shrine Institution.

The Daughters were visited by the Illinois Grand Guardian and Associate Grand Guardian.

Brazilian trip luxurious, primitive for travelers

Travelers Abroad featured a slide presentation by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schweizer, who visited Brazil.

The dinner meeting was held at Jerry's Cafeteria, with 21 members and guests present. Dr. Alice Purdes presided over a short business meeting.

The Schweizers toured Brazil with members of the World Wildlife Association. They were aware the trip would be rugged and difficult, requiring much walking. Their accommodations ranged from deluxe hotels in Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and Brasilia to crude, primitive camps in the rain forests and other areas.

Travelers in Brazil generally depended on buses, boats or airplane, since there are few trains in the country, the Schweizers said. Many roads were mere paths, and frequently the buses were too heavy for the bridges.

With 4,600 miles of Atlantic coastline and the Amazon River within the country, boats are quite common, they said.

Near Manaus, the Amazon splits into two rivers, with one going to Peru and the other to Venezuela. Distinct differences in the water can be seen. One river is muddy, and the other, black.

Schweizer was intrigued by Iguaçu Falls, which had three levels of water, and which are higher and larger than Niagara Falls. He said he photographed them from every angle. A huge dam is being constructed above the falls. Power from the dam will serve several countries.

The Pantanal area, which means "Big Swamp," was the site of much of the primitive-style touring. Some camps there are built on stilts in order to keep them out of the water during the rainy season, they said.

The couple saw many types of birds, many of which are native only to Brazil, among them emus, storks, parakeets, jacobins and oven birds, whose nests looked like mud-covered ovens.

Swimming in streams or lakes was too dangerous for the travelers due to piranha fish and caimans, members of the alligator family.

The Schweizers said the trip was "very exciting," but they probably would select trips with fewer primitive living conditions in the future.

The April meeting of Travelers Abroad will feature Marguerite Lexow with slides on France and Monte Carlo.

Allergic? Allergy sufferers can be assisted process took 10 to 20 years to complete, but today lasting relief can be achieved in three to five years. In most cases, treatment consists of weekly shots for the first year and shots every two or three weeks thereafter.

Many people don't develop allergies until well into adulthood, even as late as age 50. Others are only mildly allergic, and don't even know they are allergic until they come into close contact with a specific pollen.

One patient of Zeffren's had never had any allergies. He moved to a new house, and within a few weeks was miserable. It turned out he was mildly allergic to ash trees, and there was a big ash tree right outside his bedroom window. The steady, concentrated exposure got to him.

Such a sneezing. Your eyes are watering. You're miserable. You go see an allergist. What will he do?

Your medical history and symptoms warrant it, he will administer a series of skin tests to determine which substances you are allergic to. It might be pollen or mold, or it might be your pet.

Zeffren said the new skin tests are safe and painless.

If decongestants and antihistamines don't control your symptoms, he may try steroids. Only if the strategies fail will he start you on severe allergy shots.

"The old myth that everybody who visits an allergist leaves with a shot is no longer true," Zeffren said.

If you have no allergies, you can count your blessings, Zeffren says, but do count on never having any allergies, particularly if someone in your family has them.

There is evidence suggesting allergies are hereditary.

Which makes it comforting to know that virtually all allergies are treatable, Zeffren said. That's news that could make you weep with relief some day.

program set forth by the district in November. Jason is being taught privately in a converted trailer near Prather Elementary School.

Whether the arrangement is too restrictive.

Bowler was emotional at times in his statements to the board. When acting chairman Mack Johnson suggested that Jason's case be discussed in closed session, Bowler shouted, "I don't want to discuss this in executive session! I can discuss anything I want, and I want to bring this information to this district. Jason should be in school."

Superintendent Gil Walmsey defended the board's position.

"That is an assumption on your part," Walmsey told Bowler. "A professional staffing group has determined Jason's placement is appropriate, Walmsey said."

After the meeting, Walmsey said he was surprised by Bowler's comments. He said Jason's case is unique, but declined to speculate about the outcome of the due-process hearing.

"I think that we are dealing with one particular child and a particular set of circumstances," Walmsey said.

Bowler indicated his belief that, regardless of the outcome of the hearing, the district should avoid a lawsuit by placing Jason in a classroom with other students.

This scares me to death," Bowler said. "If I was a parent, I don't know how I would react, but I don't want to see us embroiled in a lawsuit that's going to cost us a ton of money. I don't want the district to prolong (this) and incur a bunch of legal fees."

Trivia
Kinderhook, once located a few feet south-west of Emerson School, was built by Calvin Kinder in 1858. Some accused him of "hooking" school money because he included a church in the school.

Mirrored walls are extra wonderful to install in a small bath. The special plus: They double available light, too.

Two reasons not to paint from a full can: the paint can thicken when exposed to the air and it's messy. Instead, transfer about a third of the paint to a smaller painter's bucket which you've placed on layers of newspaper over a sheet of plastic.

To create a softer Roman shade, run the cords along the outer edges only, not the center of the fabric.

Consider air flow when you install a smoke detector. An air supply register too close to the detector might blow away the smoke, delaying the alarm. An air return too close might recirculate and dilute the smoke, again delaying the alarm.

Museum may open by 1990

By Scott Simon
Staff affiliate

Since the concerted effort to rebuild downtown St. Louis began in the 1960s, one of the focal points of the redevelopment has been the creation of tourist attractions. Another St. Louis tourist attraction could be the formation of a St. Louis radio museum.

The efforts of Johnny Rabbitt (KRLD), a longtime St. Louis radio announcer and former St. Louis Globe-Democrat columnist now doing the weekday afternoon show at WIL-FM (92.7), has taken the project past the "pipe-dream" stage.

"Well, there are more people than just myself who are interested in the project," Rabbitt said. "There is a lot of broadcasting history in this town over the years that could be put together for a great museum."

Rabbitt says the collection of radio memorabilia would be part of the Mercantile Library, 510 Locust St., St. Louis.

Rabbitt said the target opening for the museum is 1990. He said items for the collection as well as interior design are needed for the museum.

"First, we need people who have been in broadcasting or know its history to come forward with information on events and the history of radio in this town," Rabbitt said. "With those people, we should be able to make enough connections to get original equipment and other things."

Items that would be of use to the museum include old bumper stickers, music play lists, original records, tapes of programs, and commercials and pictures of well-known disc jockeys.

One of those connections yielded a transmitter that was built in 1929 and used for many years by the old KSD-AM. The transmitter, which has been out of service for many years, was left on top of the building of the station's old studios at 1111 Olive St.

Rabbitt called managers at KSD-TV (Channel 5) and KSD radio, the occupants of the building at 1111 Olive when both were owned by Pulitzer publishing. He said nobody wanted the relic so he claimed it for the museum.

Anyone interested in helping set up the museum or in making a contribution should call Rabbitt weekdays at 436-1600 or call the Mercantile Library at 621-0670.

"Many viewers complained last month when KPLR-TV (Channel 11) scheduled the half-hour baseball show, 'The Hot Stove League' at 9:30 p.m. Sundays," he said.

They said it was a lousy time to schedule a show that focused on the baseball Cardinals, the hottest sports topic in town.

By reviewing the Arbitron ratings in February, the complainants were obviously right.

The four-week average measured just a 2 percent share of the audience and the Nielsen survey showed a 1 percent share.

Not only was the time slot terrible but so were the show's performers. Channel 11 sports director Rich Gould and Al Hrabosky, the Cardinals television analyst, were uptight, stiff and not very conversational.

On April 17, Channel 11 begins "This Week in Cardinals Baseball," featuring manager Whitey Herzog. The show had better work out the rough spots by then because Herzog expects television to work harder at doing a better reporting job.

If he had seen "The Hot Stove League," I think he would have turned it off.

Opinions On The Movies By Harry Hamm And Frank Hunter

'Seventh Sign' delivers mysticism

Harry Hamm

When I started to write these comments on "The Seventh Sign" (3 stars), I remembered a bottle in our medicine chest that contains a warning on the label which reads, "Caution: May cause drowsiness." That is an excellent comment on Demi Moore's new film, "The Seventh Sign."

That's not to say Mrs. Bruce Willis doesn't give it her all. She does. But "The Seventh Sign" is one of those movies that reminds you of a better movie you saw before. ("The Omen," perhaps) and doesn't come close to being as good as the original.

For one thing, if you want an audience to buy the fact that the apocalypse might be at hand, the film should be mildly convincing. "The Seventh Sign" is not. Although the special effects, including a river that runs red, a frozen village, an earthquake and several other nasty occurrences are all as good as anything you'll see on the Universal Studios tour (well, almost as good), I somehow felt that mother earth was going to survive it all and my car would be out in the parking lot where I left it, unscathed.

Michael Biehn as Moore's husband overacts. Juergen Prochnow looks bored to death as The Boarder, a mysterious guy who gets to know Moore and Biehn and seems to be their friend. He also seems to know what's really going on, but unfortunately he never shares this valuable information with the audience.

Demi Moore told me there were two endings shot for "The Seventh Sign." In one she dies, in the other she lives. I hate to give anything away, but I will say that this motion picture expires long before its star does.

THE SEVENTH SIGN

A mildly engrossing apocalyptic thriller. Demi Moore's playing the pregnant wife of an attorney (Michael Biehn) slowly learns that she and her unborn child are involved in a series of events heralding the end of the world. With Juergen Prochnow as their mysterious boarder.

Rated R (language, violence).

Frank Hunter

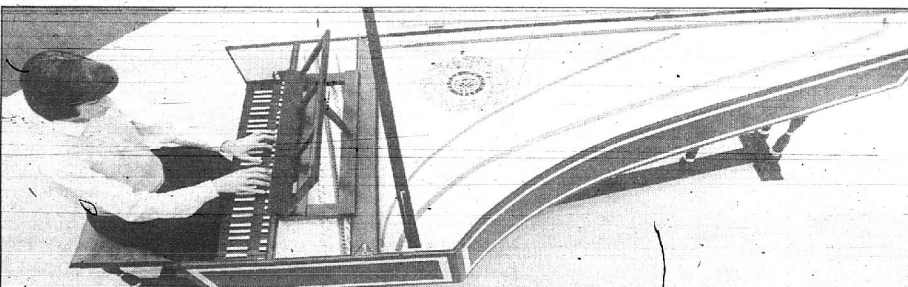

Worrying about when the world will end can lead to anxiety but maybe that's not all bad. At least it's something else to think about when you're watching television. And there are a few anxious moments during the quasi-apocalyptic thriller "The Seventh Sign" (3 1/2 stars), although the mind tends to wander when the George Kaplan-W.W. Wicket screenplay gets mired in hokey religious mysticism and detailed teachings inspired by prophecies regarding the Apocalypse.

As directed by Carl Schultz, a priest looks on while a mysterious stranger hands down forbidding predictions, disturbing signs that lead the monk and the stranger to a woman. The sun turns black, the moon glows an eerie red, there is talk of the Antichrist. There is a murder and a lawyer's pretty wife, Abby Quinn (Demi Moore), finds herself pregnant and absolutely crazy about the idea.

The fate of the world hinges on the birth and Abby senses that awesome things will happen despite foots her pragmatic husband Russell (Michael Biehn) whose imprisoned client is heading for the gas chamber.

Enter The Stranger (Juergen Prochnow), the Quinns' blazey-eyed renter who moves a carved wooden desk into his room that looks like it might contain all the Dead Sea Scrolls along with Captain Nemo's log from the Nautilus. Abby Quinn trusts him without knowing why.

The Seventh Sign was filmed in Venice, Calif., and Los Angeles. (a good place for the Apocalypse to get under way). The special effects aren't bad in a story that is far from the greatest ever told.

AMC Theaters woos customers with new 'Difference' program

By Harry Hamm
Staff affiliate

AMC Theaters has kicked off a community-wide program to improve the quality of moviegoers' experiences in AMC theaters in the St. Louis area.

The program began Feb. 23 with an orientation meeting, at the Esquire IV attended by the general managers of local AMC theaters. The meeting was held by Robert Stanz, AMC's district manager, but also attracted Richard Walsh, AMC division president, and Gary Thyer, AMC director of training. Walsh and Thyer are from AMC's corporate office in Kansas City.

The program, officially called "There is a Difference," not only is aimed at making a trip to the movies a pleasurable experience, but also is instituting customer surveys and focus groups to learn what patrons really like (and don't like) when they go to a movie theater.

Immediate changes you soon will see at many AMC theaters include pre-movie welcoming talks by general managers of theaters before prime, evening screenings—offering refreshment carts in the theaters prior to the start of a movie; increased emphasis on theater cleanliness. There also will be more attention paid to problems during a movie screening that can spoil the experience for everyone, such as crying babies and talkative patrons, and removal of bad movie prints with scratchy soundtracks.

Perhaps most important of all, efforts will be made to eliminate long waits in line at ticket windows and concession stands.

Now if they will only do something about the prices at the concession stands.

No to education tax hike

We cannot support the proposed income tax increase for education.

A strong system of education is needed if Illinois is to remain competitive in the ongoing effort to attract businesses and residents, but arguments for higher taxes to support education are not convincing.

The state has tried revenue creating ideas in the past without desired results. For example, the much-heralded state lottery won approval from many because it was suggested education would benefit. But the result has not been the hoped-for volume of extra dollars for education.

There is no guarantee that Gov. James Thompson would not use money generated by an income tax increase for other valued state programs.

As stated by 11th District Rep. Sam Wolf, D-Granite City, "The governor must change his budget priorities to reflect the state's commitment to education."

Wolf suggests cracking down on tax cheats as an alternative to higher taxes, saying that senior citizens and young people starting families face enough burdens without having to also suffer through increased taxes.

Other points worthy to consider are that the Legislature is willing to mandate programs for schools without providing a means to pay for those programs, some teachers (Belleville Area College's scale tops out at more than $50,000) and administrators (SIU's chancellor makes more than $100,000 and pulls down benefits) are paid king's salaries, and the politics seen in the way some school districts are run (BAC, for instance) make education a "turnoff."

Everyone wants a first-rate education, but before a tax increase can be supported the public has to believe there is no waste in the money currently allocated.

Require vehicle insurance

It is hard to believe, but Illinois still lacks mandatory automobile liability insurance. House members are aware of the need, and we wish Secretary of State Jim Edgar well in his current efforts to convince senators.

Thirty-nine states — all of the major states except Florida and Illinois — require motorists to have coverage in the event they cause injury, death and property damage.

The Illinois stumbling block has been reluctance to involve driver licenses in response to non-compliance, so the new approach is to target vehicle registrations for suspension. Edgar says a single unit of his office could handle the task, avoiding "red tape" and any net cost to the state.

Two million of the seven million cars and pickup trucks lack insurance, and 60,000 uninsured drivers are involved in Illinois traffic accidents every year. Legislative action is long overdue.

Compensation too costly

A survey of Illinois industries pinpoints injured worker compensation as the second most serious problem facing the companies, trailing only liability insurance cost/availability.

Bearing this out is the Grant Thornton 1987 study of permanent and temporary total disability. It shows worker compensation weekly payments average $511 in Illinois, compared to $300 in Michigan, $273 in Iowa, $198 in Kentucky, $178 in Missouri, $171 in Indiana, $151 in Wisconsin and $136 in Ohio.

From an injured worker's standpoint, the big payments are fine, but not if they weaken firms' ability to continue providing jobs in this state.

Labor-management agreement was reached in November on the need to reform Illinois worker compensation rules. Both industry and labor groups approved the state's selection of John H. Lewis, a Miami (Fla.) University law professor, to analyze the program, but a related panel has not yet been formally appointed.

Not all changes, live up to the ideal of "reform," but it would appear that Illinois needs to get on with the attempt, quickly.

Can't get there from here

As the dark days of major bridge repairs arrive, it is clear why a "light rail" rapid transit system is needed. "You just can't get there from here" if you depend solely on highways and river bridges and one-person-per-auto commuting.

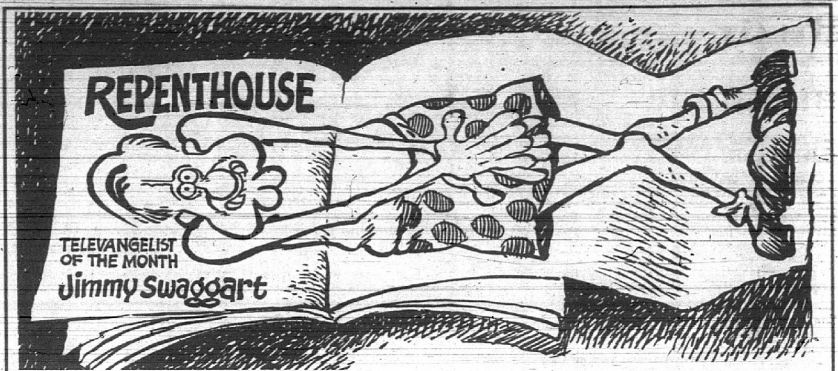

The congestion during the next four years will be painful. Light rail may not be ready during that time, but the planning for it gives hope of an eventual solution.

We agree with the Madison County Transit District on many points, but we question whether it should slam the door quite so loudly on the idea of helping to finance the proposed Metro Link system.

It would be unfortunate if the absence of commitments by St. Louis County and Madison County blocked Metro Link, because it obviously is going to be needed. A truly two-state metropolitan complex is essential; division along the banks of the Mississippi River is unthinkable.

Madison County is largely being ignored by Metro Link, which is studying connecting the basic East St. Louis to Lambert Airport route to Belleville, St. Charles and points in St. Louis and St. Louis County. Tracks from East St. Louis to the Madison-Granite City area would be relatively inexpensive to include, and would more fully justify Madison County involvement.

Letters

Representative opposes IP rates

To the editor:

On April 27 many will have an opportunity to voice their opinion about Illinois Power's proposed rate increase to help defray the cost of building the Clinton nuclear power plant.

The Illinois Commerce Commission hearing convenes at 7 p.m. in the Granite City Township Hall.

I am making people aware of this meeting early in hopes that community leaders take time to appear and voice their position on this 10-year rate increase plan.

IP estimates rates would increase perhaps no more than 32 percent under the 10-year proposal, but the state's Office of Public Counsel has estimated the increase could go as high as 56 percent.

I believe this rate increase could have a terrific impact, not only on individual ratepayers, but on our entire business community.

Under the proposed plan, a typical homeowner's bill would increase $102 and a person living in an apartment would pay an additional $52 more the first year.

Residents, businessmen and every person in our community will be affected if IP gets the rate increase.

In 1973, Illinois Power officials estimated it would cost $429 million to build the Clinton plant. Recently, they stated the cost of the plant would be nearly 10 times that amount, or $4.29 billion.

A serious question exists as to whether or not consumers should pay for excessive cost overruns incurred by building the Clinton power plant or if the stockholders should also be responsible.

Stockholders of this facility have enjoyed continuous and escalating cash dividends throughout the construction period of this nuclear project.

It would certainly seem reasonable that management (stockholders) should be required to be fiscally responsible for the major portion of this construction fiasco.

A message must be delivered to the Illinois Commerce Commission that further increases are unwarranted, unjustified, and morally inexcusable.

STATE REP. SAM WOLF

Rep. Sam Wolf Opposing IP

Thankful to be in America

To the editor:

I want to tell you about a neighbor who was found lying on the floor by another neighbor. An ambulance was called. Two paramedics came running to help the sick man. Shortly, the green rescue truck arrived, and out dashed two more young men to the rescue. Then another ambulance to help; two more young men came running with their bags and cases to help take care of the sick person. Six young men came to the rescue.

In about 30 minutes the neighbor was in the ambulance on the way to the hospital. This proved that man truly loves his neighbor. The last I heard was that the sick man was in intensive care, resting in the care of all those people in the hospital. Secure.

All was taken care of by strangers, paramedics, giving all care and concern for one life.

Meanwhile, the news on the air recently told of all the killing in the near east.

I was not born in the United States, but I'm grateful to have lived here all but six months of 78 years. What a privilege to live in the United States of America.

This help for a sick man would not have happened where I was born. My mother told us over and over, how her brother came running to tell her that a man was going to have his head chopped off in public with an axe. Mama's brother was 7-years-old at the time. Place: Austria, Hungary.

BARBARA HAHN Granite City

Hooray for clean-up work

To the editor:

Will wonders never cease. The powers that be have finally made up to the fact that the junk in the city is endangering the environment.

After a thorough survey by Casmer Skubish of the 1st Ward and Lloyd Bailey of the 6th Ward, the discovery of so much junk, debris, and junk cars in their respective wards, actually boggles the mind.

Mr. Skubish was right on when he said, "This didn't get this way overnight. Some of this debris has been here for years."

Now, a new program is being proposed, pinpointing each neighborhood for a cleanup job.

Sure hope it works out and it will if the city inspector and the Sanitation Department have enough "guts" to enforce the laws and get the job done.

Who knows, we may still get a chance to create the cleanest little steel town in America.

Media Matters

By Jack C. Ventimiglia Executive Editor

Flynt verdict stinks nicely

"Pornography II" — a sequel to the "Media Matters" column of a few weeks back...

The public ought to have the right to view obscene material, within limits, is what many in this region believe based on a poll by St. Louis Journalism Review. With the poll as a basis, I had the gal (a requirement for columnists) to suggest my ideas about porno.

I have more, and this one particularly — that in the libel case of Jerry "Moral Majority" Falwell and Larry "Show 'em Skin" Flynt, the verdict for Flynt stunk ugly AND was correct.

The basis for Falwell's libel suit, according to Editor and Publisher, was a cartoon in Hustler labeled as an advertising parody that depicted Falwell's "first time" as a "... drunken, incestuous affair with his mother in an outhouse in Virginia."

Very funny, I'm sure. Falwell said it made him feel like weeping and who'd blame him? Falwell sued. Flynt's use of the First Amendment as a defense was like the Devil claiming Sanctuary.

The First Amendment exists to allow individuals and the press to speak for or against matters of public concern without fear of being jailed (ridicule is optional). The law also allows newspapers an almost free rein to give opinions about public figures: enter editorials, cartoons and your letters.

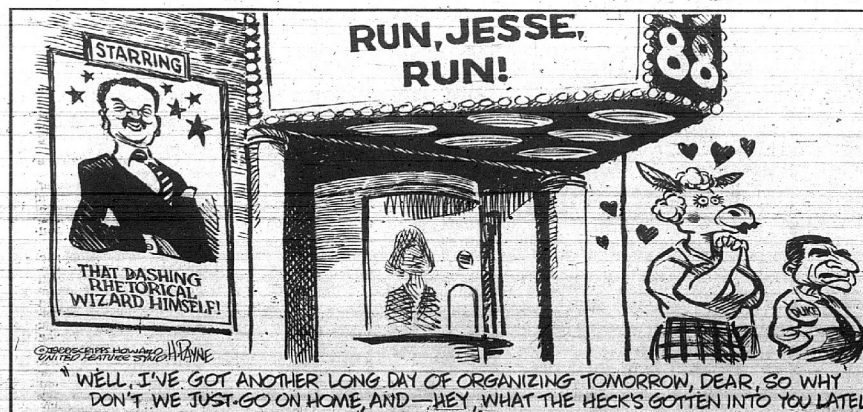

To protect our freedom, the United States Supreme Court, including its conservative chief, William Rehnquist, had to vote against Falwell and did so unanimously.

The court had no logical method for establishing guidelines to bar such objectionable cartoons as Flynt's without squelching the public's right to express itself. As stated in the court's opinion, "were we to hold otherwise, there can be little doubt that political cartoonists and satirists would be subjected to damages without showing that their work falsely defamed its subject."

And so the High Court, in essence said the public has to take the First Amendment's good with the bad.

For free expression, the verdict marked a great victory, but Flynt's "expression" stunk.

Some information for this article was taken from the Feb. 27 issue of Editor and Publisher.

Plant closing in 27th year gives $4.8 million 'reward'

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — When A.O. Smith Corp. closed its automotive frame plant here eight years ago, there were hard feelings.

Some assailed the company and its 30-year pension program for the decision to close in the early part of its 27th year of operation. Others blamed the United Auto Workers for tactics that were led by the late William Herzog, a Granite City union leader, who was one of the most controversial labor leaders in local history.

Emotions turned to joy several years later, when the plant was demolished and opened with a new mission and a new staff.

There was no longer a market for steel frames, due to auto designers' emphasis on lighter weight, more fuel-efficient vehicles, but there was a new market for steel-alloy structural cradles used in the Taurus and Sable autos.

A lot of the original workers said they felt they had been "caught in the middle" and left "out in the cold." If the plant had operated continuously from 1954 through 1984, they said, they would have qualified for 30-year pensions.

In the early 1980s, the laid-off employees met and talked as they waited in the unemployment compensation line. There they would gripe, swap work stories and share leads for employment.

It got to be such a habit that some of them decided to continue meeting after the compensation ran out.

That, President Steve Ortiz said, is how Willing Workers of America, a still active non-profit group of former A.O. Smith employees, came to be formed.

Early this year, these same employees felt "out in the cold" again. This time didn't have the dramatic, visible effects of the last time, and so far, it hasn't cost anyone any money, but it has caused more hard feelings.

A.O. Smith has terminated the Granite City Plant Industrial Pension Plan (UAW) that covers these workers. Their pensions are now paid by an insurance company. Because of the closing, many of the workers were forced to take early retirement, with reduced benefits, they say.

None of the workers receive reduced benefits because of the plant's termination. But $4,850,200 from the pension fund, termed excess, was returned to A.O. Smith upon termination of the plan, the company acknowledged.

Ortiz, one of the first hired in 1964, retired about three and a half years shy of getting his "30 years and out" full pension. Instead, he gets $160, a month — quite a bit less than half of a full pension.

Because there were so many others in the same position as Ortiz, many former Granite City

"It seems like every time you turn around, workers are getting the short end, and it's just got to stop."

David Vaughn

A.O. Smith employees say they are suspicious of the reason for the 1980 closing announcement, which occurred during a strike. They say the more than $4.8 million pension surplus is a direct result of the timing of the plant closing. And they think at least part of the money should be used for their benefit.

David Vaughn, an attorney in Fairview Heights and a son-in-law of former Illinois Gov. Dan Walker, agreed with the former employees and took up their cause. He helped plead their case with the Internal Revenue Service, responsible for overseeing the termination, and the Department of Labor.

"I'm not a pension lawyer," Vaughn said. "I was approached by a man I know, and decided to try and do what I could."

"I helped them file statements with the IRS. I wrote letters to the Labor Department and Congress. But the process seems to be automatic and there's no recourse I can see for the workers."

"It seems like every time you turn around, workers are getting "Back when we first started the Willing Workers, they were a bitter bunch. A couple of times I thought I'd have to pull them away from a guest speaker. Some of them are still bitter."

the short end, and it's just got to stop."

Vaughn equates the payment of the excess funds with a "reward" for closing the plant. In this case, he said, the timing of the closing — with so many workers needing retirement eligibility — created the surplus.

"The Granite City plant was closed for no other reason than lack of work," said Charles Wright, A.O. Smith administrator of corporate communication, who contacted in Milwaukee, headquarters of the company.

"The timing of the closing was forced upon us. Basically, our customers decided they would no longer use our product (full-car frames), putting us in a position where there was no choice but to close."

"With the (pension plan) termination, there was no reduction of benefits for any person qualified under the plan when the plant closed. The surplus existed because we had overfunded the plan. It was the result of the (funding) method we used."

"Those taking early retirement as a result of the closing receive the same benefits as any other early retiree for any other reason," Wright told the Press-Record/Journal.

Ortiz and the Willing Workers say they haven't given up hope of getting what they see as a fair share of the surplus, or at least seeing to it that someone who "needs it more than Smith" gets a share.

In the meantime, they are trying to contact all former employees of the Granite City plant for a reunion planned for this summer.

"Back when we first started the Willing Workers, they were a bitter bunch," Ortiz said. "A couple of times I thought I'd have to pull them away from a guest speaker. Some of them are still bitter."

"But I expect the reunion to be a lot of fun. We've all got a lot in common."

About real estate

Start with assessor to get your tax bill

Dear Mr. Campbell: The local bank sold my mortgage years ago to an out-of-state mortgage firm. When I pay it off, how can I be assured that tax bills will then come directly to me, and not to the mortgagee? Also, how can I be assured of the Federal Housing Administration refund when the mortgage is paid off?

Answer: The safest way to make the transition from the lender handling the taxes to you handling them, once the mortgage is paid off, is to go to your county assessor when that happy day comes and make sure that his records reflect the new shift in responsibility.

The FIA refund to which you make reference is a frequently overlooked aspect of the Federal Housing Administration-backed mortgage, the amount that the home buyer pays for mortgage insurance premiums (known as the MIP) and which protects the lender from default on the part of the buyer. A hefty portion of these premiums are due the buyer in the form of a refund when he sells, refinances or (as in your case) pays the house off, free and clear.

The normal procedure for claiming the refund is to go to your mortgage holder, once the house is paid off, and get a refund application form from them which is dutifully sent off to Washington. Actually, the mortgage holder is supposed to call your attention to this refund once you've paid it off, but it's frequently forgotten.

Since your lender is located out of state, the possibility of such a reminder from him is pretty slim so if I were you I would go to my local HUD office (the office of Housing and Urban Development, the administrator for FIA affairs) and pick up the application form, myself.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

What did you mean in a recent column when you said that the tax deductibility of mortgage "has gone by the board?"

Answer: That's not quite what I said. What I actually said was a lot of the appeal of tax deductibility on the individual's mortgage interest has gone by the board.

Although it was under attack, mortgage interest — both on the principal home and on a second home — remains just as deductible as it ever was. But, in the same tax reform package, tax brackets came down, which simply means that Uncle Sam won't be picking up as much of your interest expense as he did in the past.

Under the old tax code the top tax bracket went up to 50 percent, which meant that every dollar you were paying in mortgage interest was costing you only 50 cents out-of-pocket. Under the present code, if you are in the top 38½ percent bracket, each dollar in mortgage interest will be costing you about 72 cents or, if you are in the broader 28 percent bracket, it will be costing you 62 cents. All things are relative. That was all that I meant.

Consumer tips

Is it legal to own telephone?

By Neil F. Hartigan
Attorney general

Q. I am thinking of buying my own telephone. Is it legal to own my own phone?

A. Yes. When you buy a telephone (unless you buy the one you're renting), the Federal Communications Commission requires that the manufacturer provide you with two numbers which are usually printed on a label on the bottom or back of the phone.

The first number is the ringer equivalence number which indicates how much ringing current your phone requires. If you install too many phones on the same line, you may not hear them ring.

The second number is the FCC registration number which certifies that the phone won't damage the telephone network.

You need these numbers when reporting trouble to the telephone company. Your telephone company may also require you to report these numbers before connecting your telephone for the first time.

Q. What should I consider when I buy a phone?

A. When buying a telephone, there are several things you should consider. First of all, if this is going to be your only phone, make sure you buy one that's sturdy and reliable and will still work if your house electricity goes off.

Looks and whether or not the phone is comfortable to hold and operate are also important features.

The sound of the ring may be too loud or too soft. You may prefer the more pleasant sound of an electronic ringer.

Find out how your voice sounds to the person you're calling. Watch for reports of echoes or a tinny-sounding voice.

Check on service and the availability of replacement parts, especially for non-standard phones. Will you have to send the phone back to the factory?

Review your warranty for such information.

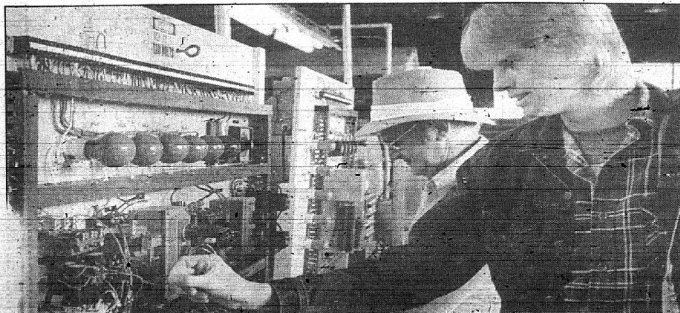

To avoid frequent repairs, look for models with solid construction, good repair records, and a modular cord.

Q. How much money can I save by buying my own phone?

A. A comparable amount of savings would be the $20 to $30 a year in rental charges you're paying, depending on which type of phone you're renting and where you live.

Check with your telephone company to see what you're paying now. Then compare that with the cost of buying and maintaining a phone, which ranges from under $10 up to hundreds of dollars, depending on features. You may also save money by buying your own jacks and wiring.

If you decide to buy, just return your rented phone to your telephone service center and make sure your phone company stops the monthly rental charges.

'Monster rocket' planned by General Dynamics

By John Hartsock
P-RJ Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Secreted away in General Dynamics laboratories in San Diego, engineers have hunkered down to their computer terminals and the mind-boggling business of designing a new monster rocket the likes of which hasn't been seen since the manned missions to the Moon.

The payoff, if the company wins the contract for the Advanced Launch System, known as ALS, could be in the billions of dollars.

Yet the cost of launching the rocket, which will be capable of carrying a payload three times larger than the Titan — the largest rocket currently in the American rocket inventory — will only be a fraction of what it costs to launch space shuttles.

"Our primary goal with the ALS program is to significantly reduce the cost of getting to space," Air Force Secretary Edward C. "Pete" Aldridge said recently when he unveiled the program.

The joint Air Force-National Aeronautics Space Administration rocket should be ready for launching by the late 1990s, he said.

The program is just one more piece of the fallout from the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger two years ago. That disaster brought home to space and defense officials just how vulnerable America's space program was by relying solely on the shuttle.

At the time, the government was winding down its last purchases of Atlas, Titan and Delta rockets — only to discover from the disaster that there was a need for an alternative: good, reliable, mid-fashioned rockets.

Last July Aldridge awarded $5 million contracts to each of seven aerospace firms to define the parameters of a monster rocket that would in effect get better gas mileage than the old work-horse rockets which have dominated American rocketry for the last 30 years.

In addition to General Dynamics, they include old rivals Martin Marietta and McDonnell Douglas, makers of the Titan and Delta rockets, respectively, as well as new competition eager to establish a presence in the major leagues of the rocket business: Boeing Aerospace of Seattle, Hughes Aircraft Co. of El Segundo, Calif., Rockwell International of Downey, Calif., and USBI Booster Production Co. of Huntsville, Ala.

In July 1988 the Air Force hopes to choose designs from two of the companies, and a final contractor should be picked in the summer of 1989, said Lt. Col. Rick Oborn, an Air Force spokesman.

The Air Force is looking for a rocket that can launch a payload of up to 150,000 pounds into a what is called "low-earth orbit," or about 150 miles above the earth's surface, he said.

By comparison, the Saturn rocket carrying the first manned mission to the Moon in 1968 carried a payload of 118,000 pounds. The shuttle has a payload capacity of 50,000 pounds.

Estimated tax payment due

The Internal Revenue Service is reminding those required to make estimated tax payments on their 1988 income that the first installment is due by April 15.

Form 1040ES, Estimated Tax for Individuals, is the document used to make estimated tax payments.

Persons who receive unemployment compensation during the year may also need to make estimated tax payments on that income.

Unemployment compensation became fully taxable as a result of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. A spokesman said, "If you have questions on whether you need to make estimated tax payments, call the IRS toll free at 800-424-1040."

"If you are an employee, you can avoid the estimated tax payment requirement by increasing the amount of tax withheld by your employer. You need only file a new Form W-4.

"The IRS has a free Publication 919, which has a worksheet that will help you determine your 1988 tax liability. This publication along with the Form 1040ES can be ordered from the IRS by calling 800-424-3676.

"There are only two tax rates in 1988 — 15 percent and 28 percent.

"To avoid any possibility for the IRS to assess you with the penalty for underpayment of estimated tax, carefully examine your withholding to make sure at least 90 percent of your 1988 tax liability is paid by estimates or withholding by your employer."

Pinkerton to succeed Mikesell

The Southwestern Illinois Metropolitan and Regional Planning Commission has appointed Robert L. Pinkerton as its executive director, effective May 1.

Pinkerton was chosen from more than 50 applicants for the position. He succeeds Theodore H. Mikesell, who is retiring.

Pinkerton has over 25 years of professional planning experience. He has served as executive director of the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission in Peoria for the past 13 years, and was formerly executive director of the Champaign County Regional Planning Commission in Urbana.

He holds a bachelor's degree and master's degree in urban and regional planning from Southern Illinois University and has completed additional graduate work toward a Ph.D. with emphasis in urban analysis, geography, geology, and city management.

Pinkerton has been active in numerous professional organizations, including present affiliation with the American Institute of Certified Planners, American Planning Association, International City Management Association, Illinois Association of Regional Councils, and the Illinois State Comprehensive Outdoor Recreation Planning Advisory Committee.

Formerly from the Belleville area, Pinkerton returns to Southwestern Illinois with much interest and expertise to work with leaders in the seven-county region served by the commission. President Norman Riesco said, "The commission's executive committee includes Mayor John Bellofio of Madison."

Showdown at OK Corral April 27?

During "Oscar Week," thoughts go back to many past motion pictures, including the one about the "fight at the OK Corral." Will a similar showdown occur at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 27, at the Granite City Township Hall?

The Illinois Commerce Commission has scheduled a hearing on Illinois Power Co. electric rates, and the public may respond by attending in considerable numbers.

Helen Hawkins said this week she and many of her fellow Democratic precinct committeemen are distributing anti-IP circulars, in their neighborhoods, urging people to visit the hearing and voice opposition to higher electricity charges.

One of the papers in circulation this week, prepared by the Citizens Utility Board, is headed: "Another IP rate hike? They've got to be kidding!"

HELEN EMPHASIZED that the commission has not used the IP staff in this area, but that they are antagonistic to the rate plan submitted to the ICC from the utility's headquarters in Decatur.

It would seem that Carl Mathias, respected and well liked, picked the right era to work for Illinois Power; he retired last year as assistant vice president after previous service as the Madison County area manager.

His successor, Ron Daine, also respected and well liked, may find his timing is less fortunate. The next few years could be turbulent, compared to the past several decades.

AN UNUSUAL rate proposal is part of the fast-developing furor.

It calls for an increase that is said to average 11 percent, in November 1988, and then — for the next six to nine years — variable yearly rate increases, ranging from 4 to 5.9 percent, with the amount determined by the previous year's inflation.

A rate decrease is proposed for the seventh or 10th year. Opponents such as the Illinois public action council calculate the potential inflation and warn that the utility may be asking for an immense cumulative total.

ILLINOIS POWER points out the possibility that the lower end of the variable factor might prevail. It contends the rate uptrend might not be as severe as it appears.

Regional Roundup

By Bill Winter

A difficult-to-resolve dilemma has arisen, and a classic confrontation may lie ahead. As the dispute unfolds, it will be up to each individual to define who are the "good guys" and who are the "bad guys."

AROUND THE REGION: Dozens of major events have been planned by local organizations for this spring.

Included are such events as the Knights of Columbus as the annual Tri-City Area YMCA dinner April 21 and the annual Old Six Mile Historical Society dinner dance April 30.

How did we ever get by before the Russell Johnson Elementary School was sold and converted into quarters for the K. of C.?

THE SALVATION ARMY's yearly civic banquet is planned for April 19 at the SA building in Granite City.

Slavic and East European Friends of SUE will conduct their 23rd annual conference and banquet April 23 at the university.

And the second annual Granite City Sports Hall of Fame dinner is set for St. Gregory's Hall on May 6.

A CENTURY AGO, the Women's Missionary Union was established, and the final Madison County Baptist Association WMU centennial celebration is a dinner at 8:30 tonight at Second Baptist Church in Granite City.

The centennial committee will re-enact the organizational meeting of May 14, 1888, and many of those present at tonight's event will appear in clothing reminiscent of 100 years ago.

Miss Anne Armstrong will be portrayed by Rita Miller and a group calling itself the Sweet Alkalines will entertain.

The statewide WMU observance will take place in Springfield on April 23-30.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE two weeks can make.

The St. Clair County Board had turned down renewed operation of the Miami Landfill south of Madison but approved the plan 20-4 Monday.

Proponents included Board Chairman Jerry Costello, veteran Centerville political leader Francis Touchette, a citizen group formed to study solid waste pollution and an environmental group known as People Against Landfills.

A mound of garbage is to be created to "improve drainage."

Americans like to play.

By Ink Mendelsohn

Smithsonian News Service

Congratulations! "You have just won second prize in a beauty contest."

For more than 50 years, children, women and men all over the world have been receiving this welcome news. Not at all insulted at not winning first prize, they gleefully collect the $10 that will bring them that much closer to bankrupting their rivals.

"In the 1930s when Monopoly came on the American scene with its goal of amassing money and property," historian Ellen Roney Hughes says, "it reflected the personal aspirations and materialistic impulses in American society."

At the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, and at other museums, Hughes and her colleagues are collecting games Americans played.

Game boxes, boards, tokens and spinners or rollers of chance are instructive, artistic and often fantastic bits and pieces of the archaeology of play that recount historical events, recall social concerns and reveal individual idiosyncrasies.

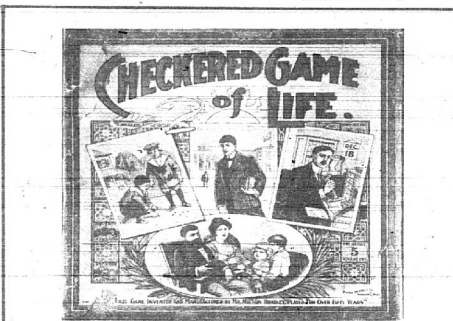

"More and more, we are coming to realize the importance of studying leisure activities like game playing," Hughes says.

It's not only what is in the box that interests historians about games.

"The lithographs on the box covers reflect our culture more than any collectible you can think of," Lee Dennis says.

Dennis, who has an extensive antique game collection that is open to the public at The Game Preserve, her museum in Peterborough, N.H., points out that there are hundreds of game collectors around the country. Many of them belong to the American Game Collectors Association, which is dedicated to unearthing historical and cultural associations of American games.

There is evidence that human beings almost everywhere have been playing board games about 5,000 years. The royal

Milton Bradley's first game, the "Checkered Game of Life," debuted in 1860. Bradley intended that his game inculcate moral values, as players attempted to reach "Happy Old Age," and avoid "Poverty, Disgrace and Ruin."

graves of the First Dynasty of Ur (c.3500 B.C.) in what is today Iraq yielded a Backgammon-type board, and the tomb of Egyptian King Tutankhamen (who reigned from 1361 to 1350 B.C.) revealed game boards, men and short sticks and animal knuckle bones used like dice to determine moves.

At times, similar board games seem to have appeared independently in different cultures. European colonists introduced draughts or checkers — which the philosopher Plato called a "favorite diversion in every corner of the earth" — to North American Indians.

Before European contact, however, the Zuni people in New Mexico were playing Awitlak-nakne, a game that, like checkers, depends on the strategy of capture and immobilization of an opponent's men.

Most often, board games have spread from one culture to another. In one ancient game, the "men" were real women. Pachisi has been played in India for about 1,200 years. Akbar the Great, a Mogul emperor who ruled from 1556 to 1605, and his friends often enjoyed this game using slaves from his harem wearing brightly colored dresses as playing pieces on a giant marble board.

According to the 1870 catalog of Selchow & Righter in New York, its newly acquired game, Parcheesi — once the game of emperors — "had a larger sale than any other game on the market in the same space of time."

Some of America's very first board games were announced in the New York Advertiser on Dec. 25, 1823: "HOLIDAY PRESENTS... Juvenile Pastimes all of which will be found to improve as well as amuse the Youthful mind, viz: GEOGRAPHICAL GAMES The Travelers Tour through the United States."

In 1843, the W. & S. B. Ives Co. of Salem, Mass., issued The Mansion of Happiness, created by Anne W. Abbott, a clergyman's daughter.

Players spun a top called a tectotum — dice were the "instruments of the devil" — that directed their fateful journey through Passion and Prudence, Immodesty and Industry right up to the Summit of Dissipation before reaching The Mansion of Happiness.

On the eve of the Civil War, in 1860, Bradley published his invention, The Checkered Game of Life. Bradley intended that his game inculcate moral values, as players attempted to reach "Happy Old Age" and avoid "Poverty, Disgrace and Ruin."

At the end of the long and bloody conflict, a war-weary nation turned away from moral lessons. The industrialization and new technology spurred on by the necessities of war brought new manufacturing capabilities.

Improvements in printing with chromolithography, the cheaper manufacture of paper and more leisure time for middle-class Americans made game playing a profitable business and a national pastime.

"Initially, the fun of games was used to teach children moral lessons: history, geography, science and mathematics," Judy Emerson says.

Emerson, the curator of recreational artifacts at Rochester's Margaret Woodbury Strong Museum, points out that "by the late Victorian era, for both children and adults, fun was for fun."

Playing parlor games was fun for young George Parker, but he was also a child of the Gilded Age. When Rockefeller's, Turners and Vanderbilts floated on clouds of high finance.

So in 1883, 16-year-old George invented a game called Banking, in which players could draw money from the bank at 10 percent interest for speculative investments with the object of amassing the most wealth. Eventually, game inventor George joined in the burgeoning business by his brothers Charles and Edward.

Parker Brothers, Milton Bradley, Selchow & Righter and other companies followed hard on the heels of the news, fashions and famous people of the day with their games.

The Spanish-American War in 1898 inspired The Siege of Havana, Admiral Dewey, War in Cuba, The Battle of Manila and The Philippine War. In 1901, the Motor Carriage Game, had the new-fangled thing always breaking down and getting flat tires.

World War I even had its own games. Soldiers of the Advance Guard, The Great War and War Games all came out in 1915. And Lindbergh's 1927 solo flight across the Atlantic was honored with Lindy, The Flight to Paris and Six-H.

The Radio Game, Polly Pickles, Queen of the Movies and The Moving Picture Game announced America's fascination with its new entertainments.

The stock market crash couldn't depress a game-loving people. The great game show was inexpensive fun at home when money was scarce. And out of the Great Depression, two game giants came onto the playing field — Monopoly and Scrabble.

An unemployed New York artist, Alfred Butts, experimented in the 1930s with a game in which words were made from random letters printed on squares of cardboard.

When Charles Darrow, an unemployed heating engineer from Pennsylvania, brought Monopoly to Parker Brothers in 1934, they rejected it, deeming it a letter to Darrow, "Your game is too simple."

Darrow produced the game himself, and the 5,000 sets he sold to Wamamakers in Philadelphia were the hit of the 1935 Christmas season. Parker Brothers had a change of heart, and Monopoly was the company through the Depression.

T'ai Chi/Chinese discipline brings health

By Gail Stalboath

Staff affiliate

Anna Lum says she hasn't had a cold in more than 10 years.

But good health is only one of Lum's motivations for practicing the Chinese discipline of Tai Chi, says the Creve Coeur resident.

She will teach a Tai Chi workshop as part of Jewish Hospital's "The Body Works" from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday at the Doubletree Hotel and Conference Center, 1625 Swingley Ridge Road in Chesterfield.

"The Body Works" is sort of a "spa for a day," organizers say. The sessions include physical activities such as belly dancing, head and neck massage, water exercises, yoga, nautilus workouts and others.

However, Tai Chi "goes beyond the physical," Lum says. It is similar to yoga in that it involves meditation and a pattern of movements.

"Tai Chi is allowing movements to happen instead of forcing them to happen," Lum says.

It takes Lum about 20 minutes to complete her daily routine of movements, a regimen that, at this time of year, serves to clear her sinuses and bring her relief from an oak-pollen allergy.

From a teaching perspective, Lum's style differs from the traditional approach that emphasizes precision movements, she says.

"My approach is very different than traditional Tai Chi," she says. "The original masters were very much like aggressive martial artists. Students were always asking 'Am I doing it perfectly right?'"

The emphasis was on the roles of master and student, "but ultimately we are our own best teachers," Lum says.

Most students take away enough Tai Chi knowledge from just one class to make a difference in their approach to life, Lum says. She says almost everyone leaves the session with more energy.

"It becomes more of a physical thing; it becomes a real high."

Lum normally teaches six-week sessions at places such as the Campus YMCA at Washington University.

Her interest in Tai Chi was sparked by a demonstration she saw in Hawaii 26 years ago. She first studied in the early 1970s under an American who had not studied the philosophy of Tai Chi, just the movements.

But the Chinese philosophy already was part of Lum's life.

She was born in China, then moved to New York. She came to St. Louis in the early 1960s.

She has traveled to California, Hawaii and Hong Kong to study Tai Chi.

In addition to teaching many classes, she has given demonstrations at several local events, including the Olivette Summerfest and the Big River Arts Festival.

Lum also is a poet who is about to have her book, "The Body Works: The First Line," published by the University of Missouri Press. The book, "The Urge to Play God," a collection of 22 poems, is scheduled to be published in May by Moonshadow Press as part of a Craft Alliance project.

The idea of publishing a book at first seemed contrary to the philosophy of living in the moment, because "it's kind of embedded in time when you print it," Lum says.

And watching students embrace "Tai Chi for the first time in a workshop such as Saturday's is gratifying too, she says.

Spaying, neutering hold keys to controlling overpopulation

April has been designated "Prevent A Litter Month" by the U.S. Congress. The object of their decree is to encourage responsible pet ownership through spaying and neutering, proper animal care and sheltering, and compliance with animal-control regulations.

Pet overpopulation has become so rampant that human frustration with the problems related to abandonment, starvation, injury and neglect of animals.

The Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) has launched a graphic, explicit campaign to make the general public aware of the problems that plague practically every community in our nation. More than 7.5 million shelter animals must be humanely destroyed every year. An overwhelming surplus of dogs and cats are forced to live in alleys and abandoned buildings. These animals were condemned to a slow, painful death from the moment of their birth.

By Sandy Ganz

"For many of them, the only kindness they've known is the shelter worker's loving touch," says Dr. Thomas W. Smith, HSUS vice president for companion animals.

For most of them, especially the strays, death may be a relief. After all, being humanely destroyed at a shelter is far better than starving or freezing to death or being hit by a car."

The emaciated, diseased bodies of surviving strays cannot tell the entire story of their suffering. Four out of every five dogs and cats in the United States are homeless, starving, cold and neglected. Some human minds have apparently come to the conclusion that a heavenly person or agency will care for their discarded animal or litter they have carelessly created.

Can you imagine that in six years, one female dog and her offspring can be the source of 67,000 puppies? In a period of seven years, one cat and her offspring can produce 420,000 cats.

Most of these animals face certain death because there are too few loving, caring homes.

The number of family pets that are deserted by owners after years of being cared for is staggering. How can they suddenly be expected to fend for themselves when left sitting in front of the house or tossed out of a car on a country road? If they are not killed instantly by a car, they can suffer for days or weeks at the mercy of busy city streets, or in the wild of the country pursued by feral animals, wildlife and the elements.

This is a gruesome situation that we have all propagated. The best means of helping to solve such an overwhelming problem is for each individual to take an active role. Do not shrug off the necessity of pitching in, and do not leave the burden to the next guy.

Spaying and neutering will end the cycle. It will end the suffering of homeless strays and unwanted animals through zero population growth. It is the best way to reduce overpopulation.

The second and final step in controlling the animal population is to encourage community legislation to enact and enforce licensing and registration of all pets. In addition, differential licensing laws that increase license fees for animals that have not been spayed or neutered will encourage pet owners to sterilize their animals.

Not until pet owners act responsibly, not until they spay and neuter their pets, will we see a significant reduction in homeless, unwanted animals. Be a PAL — Prevent A Litter.

Do not expect the children to entertain themselves. Plan activities for the session and change activities often, approximately every 15 to 20 minutes.

It's a good idea to check with your homeowner's insurance company to be sure any accidental damage is covered. Better safe than sorry.

Faith in resurrection makes peace with life

By John Stahlman
Staff affiliate

Last weekend my wife suggested that we drive past the home of my deceased parents. We had done that only a couple of times since their deaths a year and a half ago. I agreed, thinking a year and a half was enough time to take the sting out of a drive down Church Street. If time has made memories much more dear, surely it has made them a lot less painful.

The new owners of the house I once called home have settled in and made some obvious changes. It wasn't like it used to be, but honestly demanded a favorable judgment. The overgrown shrubs that an 80-year-old couldn't trim were gone and trees about the age of the children now living there were growing in the formerly open lawn. The house looked like it was in good hands and had a future.

As I turned the corner I didn't look back. Instead, I sighed with relief that I had made peace with the death of my parents. Even so, I also acknowledged that the slowly arriving peace did not erase the memory of pain, grief, regret and sorrow. Whatever else might pass, the memory will stay.

A few weeks ago, I received a late night telephone call from a friend I had made in Vietnam. I had not seen him for years and only heard from him via our annual Christmas card exchange. As soon as I recognized his voice, I wondered why he had called.

He had just seen the movie "Good Morning Vietnam," had thought of me and decided to call. As he talked about the movie, my half-awake mind rushed back to the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C., and I remembered other friends whose names are engraved on the black wall between memorials to Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

For 19 years I had lost a lot of sleep wondering about the reasons I came home to the warmth of family while friends came home to the cold ground of Arlington Cemetery. But my visit to the memorial three years ago changed all that. In a mystical way, that visit to the memorial set me at peace with my fallen comrades.

Last Sunday, I heard and sang one of the great Lenten hymns. That one hymn reminded me of others: "O Sacred Head, Now Wounded," "Beneath the Cross of Jesus," "Alas! Did My Saviour Bleed" and "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" The memory of those great hymns took my mind back to a death a couple thousand years ago. Even though it was more distant than my parents' deaths or the Vietnam War, it required that I make peace with it just as I have with the other deaths that have touched the marrow of my bones. Because I now call the tragic day of his death Good Friday, I am confident that I have made peace with his death.

These three recent experiences have reminded me that the good life consists, at least in part, of making peace with the death of others. Although death interrupts good plans, eats at the foundation of hope and breeds regret, it can be brought to the peace table.

But there is more to life than making peace with death. Without peace with the living, there is no peace.

Overcoming grief for dead parents is not as important as the living relationship with children. Instead of putting regrets behind us, our energy is better spent looking forward to sparing our children from regrets and bitterness.

Overcoming the trauma of dead and missing friends does not have the same rewards as the protection of living friendships does. It's one thing to be at peace with the dead, it's quite another to be reconciled with the living.

Good Friday is not as important as Easter. How we respond to the death of Jesus is not nearly as important as how we live after his resurrection.

Death is easily found in daily life. With effort, peace with death can be made. And best of all, with faith, resurrection makes peace with life, with the living, and with God.

Trittschuh gaining confidence in rookie season

By Dan Caesar
Staff affiliate

He's been up. He's been down. He's even been all around.

It certainly has been a strange year for Steve Trittschuh, who has experienced the high of playing for the United States National soccer team that is on the verge of qualifying for the Olympics, and the depths of playing for the Steamers, who have the worst record in the Major Indoor Soccer League.

But the bottom line is that Trittschuh, a rookie defender, is playing for the Steamers. That wasn't the case earlier in the season, when he was held out for six games after playing in 11 of the club's first 14 games.

"I've really got a lot of confidence back now," said Trittschuh, a 1983 graduate of Granite City North and a two-time All-American at SIUE. "I felt good at first, then lost a little confidence. But I'm a lot more comfortable now."

And coach Tony Glavin is comfortable with Trittschuh's progress.

He did well for us early, but then at times was getting caught out of position," Glavin said. "We didn't play him for awhile. But he was very patient. He works hard, he listens. He's got a good mental attitude, a good head."

That patience has paid off recently, as Trittschuh has been getting plenty of playing time. "I just thought it was time to bring him back," Glavin said. "He's played well. He's composed and he's shown poise. It was a difficult situation for him earlier, sitting out a lot. That can either make or break a player many times. He had the right attitude to carry him through."

Trittschuh is quick out of the backfield and often becomes involved in the offense. He has scored five goals and 10 points in 32 games, a pace that would make him the team's leading scorer among defenders if he had played in all the games.

"I love to run," he said. "That's my game. I love to get in the offense. Maybe I should hold back more some, I know. But that's the way I play the game."

Glavin has to throw out a last-second caution.

"That's his natural game," Glavin said of Trittschuh's desire to attack. "At times I've got to restrain him. But for the most part, he's done it well. It's just a matter of getting him to do that at the right time. Once in a while I'd like him to hold up. But he hasn't been caught up into that too much."

Trittschuh was the man Glavin wanted during last summer's draft. He said the Steamers would have selected Trittschuh even if they had a higher pick.

"I had never seen him play indoors, but I knew his qualities," Glavin said. "My brother had seen him a few times and he highly recommended him."

Trittschuh often has taken an offensive approach to playing defense. He is not afraid to attack, and many times races deep into the opponent's zone. In the outdoor game, not many are better than him at going into the air and heading the ball.

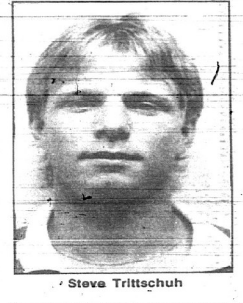

When the Steamers' season ends, he will turn his full attention to the U.S. National team, which will meet El Salvador on May 25 in Indianapolis. The Americans need only a tie in that match to earn a spot in the Summer Olympics.

"It's like I'm in the middle of a dream," Trittschuh said. "This is something that is just unbelievable."

And Trittschuh is confident he will not be bumped off the roster by other professionals. Often in previous years, the team that plays in one round is replaced by pros who are available later.

(He coach Lothar Osiander) said he was sticking with the guys who got us this far," Trittschuh said. "He told me he was going to give me a call. And I'm ready."

And the fact the Steamers are out of the playoff race is a blessing in disguise for Trittschuh. "It's bad that we aren't in, but there's a consolation for me personally in that I'm sure I'll be available for that game in Indianapolis," he said. "It's a once-in-a-lifetime chance."

Not much good results from 10-0 loss at Alton

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

ALTON — Hey, Bob Stegemeyer, what nice thing can you say about Tuesday's game at Gordon Moore Park?

"Well, Chris Nolan led off the game with a nice hit," the Warrior coach said.

Yes?

Anything else...

Nolan's game-starting hit was the only Warrior safety of the day while the Alton Redbirds went wild against Mike Krausz and Darren Huffman for 14 hits and a 10-0, five-inning victory.

Besides dropping the Warriors to 500 overall (5-5) and in Southwestern Conference play (1-1), the game didn't exactly leave Stegemeyer with the brightest of outlooks. The only good thing was that the Redbirds took care of business so quickly that everyone got home for supper at a reasonable hour.

"We were lackadaisical, dead and not working in practice yesterday and we were the same today," Stegemeyer said. "I could see this coming. We didn't play with any enthusiasm the other day at McCluer and we didn't today."

The Redbirds, who were handed two five-inning losses by the Warriors last year, were more than happy to return the favor on Tuesday. That in itself goes to show how far this Warrior team is from the 29-10 unit of 1987 that almost went to state.

"On a day like today, we can be pretty dangerous," said first-year Redbird coach Scott Posey. "The wind was blowing out a little and we have some power in the middle of the lineup."

The home-run power on Tuesday came from center fielder Wayne Harris and left fielder Wilbur Kaiser, both of whom hit two-run homers off of Krausz, who allowed seven runs in his three innings.

"They have a good fastball-hitting team," Stegemeyer said. "They hit all of Mike's fastballs."

In addition to the two long balls, the Redbirds (1-1, 3-5) had five doubles and a triple and 14 hits altogether. The Warriors, meanwhile, were limited to one hit and four baseruns in five innings by lefty Mike Krausz (3-1). The shutout lowered Milligan's earned run average to 5.25.

"I would say he reminded me of Sandy Koufax, Lefty Gomez and Carl Hubbell," said Stegemeyer, who was in the mood for a little sarcasm. "We just show no aggressiveness at the plate. We had a man at third with one out in one inning and three straight hitters took fastballs on the first pitch. Their pitcher didn't throw more than two curve balls for strikes all day, and we take fastballs. We're not thinking baseball."

After Nolan's leadoff hit, Craig Dippel hit a screaming liner right at first baseman Kyle Steiner, who turned it into an unassisted double play. Joe Wallace walked in the second, stole second, and went to third on a throwing error. But Kory Burton grounded to first and Chris Bartling popped out after Chris Ryan was hit by a pitch. Dippel got a two-out walk in the third, but that was the entire offense.

Krausz got in two-out trouble in the first two innings. Mike Maronie doubled with two outs in the first and scored on Chris Markel's hit. Jason Armstrong walked, stole second and scored on Kaiser's hit.

Three consecutive doubles preceded Harris' opposite-field homer in the third and Kaiser drove in another run with a hit for a 7-0 lead. In the fifth, Huffman was roughed up for a double by Armstrong, a homer by Kaiser and Maronie's RBI hit that ended the game.

I thought their pitcher was tough in the first two innings," Posey said. "We needed this one because our confidence was VENICE — Dale Turner was lucky.

He was — and is — good, make no mistake about that. But he was lucky — luckier in some ways than teammates like Ed Ware, Vincent Harris and Wilfred Wigfall.

Turner on Wednesday signed his letter of intent to play college basketball at Northern Iowa University in Cedar Falls, Ia. He firmly established himself this season as an NCAA Division I player while leading the Venice Red Devils to a 20-6 record and another regional championship.

Other Red Devils of the recent past like Ware, Harris and Wigfall were outstanding players, but all of them had to settle for junior college basketball. There were various reasons for that, but a big one is that they were all overshadowed by a fellow named Jesse Hall.

Hall was Venice's basketball for four years, culminating with the night he hit two free throws to give the Devils the 1987 state championship. He took his high-wire act to Michigan State University. But Turner, one of the key players on that state title team, had something Harris and Wigfall — two other keys to the title — didn't have. He had another year at Venice to emerge from Hall's formidable shadow.

And did.

"I was a little overshadowed by Jesse when he was here, like everybody else was," Turner said. "But I had another year to prove myself and I was pretty happy with the year I had. There were a couple of bad games, but everyone has that."

With Hall's 24 points a game gone north, the points had to come from somewhere else. Junior center Daryl Jackson picked up some of the slack, but Turner became the team leader. He raised his scoring average from 10.0 points to 20.3, and it didn't hurt the other parts of his game. He led the area in assists with 241 0.6 per game and had a 17-assist game against Madison on Feb. 2.

"Dale has an excellent chance to step in and contribute right away," said Northern Iowa coach Kevin Lehman. "We don't have anyone right now with his passing skills and floor vision."

Turner put in a long summer's work improving on his shot. "I went to a Blue Chip camp at Northern Kentucky University last summer and worked hard on improving my shot," he said. "I shot at the every day and played with the elites at night. Then I went two days further out and work on the three-point shot."

With that new feature in place last season, Turner made 57 three-pointers, including seven when he had a career-high 31

Madison sweeps boys, girls meets at home

It was a day for the Green Machine as the Madison boys and girls track teams won home meets on Monday. Both the Trojans and Trojannes came out on top in five-team meets. The boys got their usual outstanding effort from Ian Smith as they accumulated 77½ points in topping Belleville Althoff, Lebanon, Duplo and East St. Louis Assumption.

Smith won the 100, 200 and 400 sprint events again, while James Whitehead and Fred Strauthers also won individual meets. The Trojannes also won two relay events as they edged Althoff. The Crusaders finished with 73 points, followed by Lebanon (67½), Duplo (33) and Assumption (22).

Smith won the 100 in 11.1 seconds, the same time as Keith Chavis of Althoff. But Smith just outleashed him at the wire. Jessie Leonard came in tied for third at 11.3. Smith won the 200 in 23.3, beating Chavis by a second. Chris Griggs of Madison was fifth at 25.0. Smith finished his customary triple crown by winning the 400 in 51.2. Griggs was third in that event at 57.8.

Whitehead took the 800 meter run with a time of 2:15.7, while Scott Kosienki was fifth in 2:18. Strauthers won the discus with a throw of 134-3/4, three feet farther than his closest competitor.

The Trojannes got second places from Jimmy Hall in the 110 high hurdles, 18.6; Leonard in the long jump, 16.8; and Howard Murray in the high jump, 5-10. Marvin Gates was third in the long jump at 17-10½. Jose Dixon was fourth in the 3200 run at 13:09; and Kostenek took fifth in the 110 high hurdles, 20.26, and the 1600 meters, 5:35.06.

The Trojannes won the 400 relay in 45.8 with Jason Briggs, Kenny Griggs, Leonard and Smith. They also took the 800 relay while placing second in the 3200 relay and third in the 1600 relay.

The Trojannes had an even easier time as they racked up 81 points. Duplo (49), Assumption (47) and Althoff (36) weren't even close. Lebanon brought up the rear with two points.

Madison swept the relay events. Sheila Marshall, Sharon Browley, Vivian Turner and Melissa Davenport took the 800 medley in 1:59.8; Marshall, Turner, Browley and Anita Rockett took the 400 in 55.0; Brandi Woods, Detra Blakely, LaWanda Richardson and Chelsea Smith took the 3200 in 16:38; and Marshall, Turner, Tramia Burt and Browley took the 800 in 1:59.3.

Freshman Jovanne Russell won the shot put (29-1¼) and discus (88-7½) events. Vivian Turner won the 200 in 27.3; Davenport took the 400 in 65.8; and Woods won the 1600 in 7:55.

Second places went to Arion Dickies in the discus, 78-3/4; Dickies in the shot put, 28-1½; Browley in the long jump (14-9); Burt in the high jump (4-8); and Blakely in the 800 (2:50). Thirds went to Katrina Garrett in the 100 (13.6); Jennie Smith in the 200 (30.8); and Blakely in the long jump (13.5). Richardson had a fourth in the 800 (3:08). Madison will run again on Collinsville's new track on Monday in a triangular meet in which Belleville Althoff will also participate.

Purvis, Frazier and Jones win at Tri-City

By Joe Senter
 Correspondent

GRANITE CITY — Jeff Purvis, Tony Frazier and Dave Jones were the feature event winners in the first weekend of action at Tri-City Speedway.

Purvis, of Clarksville, Tenn., took both the Friday and Saturday events for a clean sweep. Friday's feature paid him $500 to win the 20-lap event on the ½-mile dirt track. He collected $5,000 to win the 50-lap event on Saturday. Purvis drove a Phoenix Construction-sponsored, C.J. Rayburn-built Trans Am in the late model stock car event.

Mike Wallace, one of the track's big winners, went out on the fourth lap of the main event with a flat tire. Wallace drives a Larry Shaw-built Trans Am sponsored by the Althoff Trucking Co. and owned by Bob Quinn's Auto Bargain Center of St. Louis. Another track favorite, Bert Cheatham, crashed in the first turn on the ninth lap but was unharmed.

Finishing behind Purvis on Friday was Jack Boggs of Webbville, Ky. Larry Phillips was third, Bob Pierce fourth, Charlie Schwartz fifth and Terry Phillips sixth. Heat races were won by Billy Moyer, Purvis, Pierce and Boggs. The fastest qualifying time went to Donnie Moran, 23.46 seconds.

In Saturday's race, Larry Phillips took the lead at the drop of the green flag and led until the 15th lap when he went out with mechanical problems. Moyer took over the lead until the 28th lap when Purvis powered past him and held on for the balance of the race.

Moyer finished second, followed by Moran, Boggs, Willy Kraft and Schwartz. Wallace took the "B" main feature followed by Terry Phillips. Moyer, Moran and Steve Francis took the heat races as Moran set a new track record of 20.98 seconds.

In the All Star Circuit of Champions, Frazier, of Alton, took Friday's street stock car feature followed by Bill Patton. Dave Jones of Godfrey took Saturday's street stock car feature and was followed by Rick Carter.

The All Star Circuit of Champions will take over the track this weekend with the street stocks. There are expected to be 40 winged sprint cars from many states on hand.

down. We got no-hit the other day (by Edwardsville), so you never know what will happen." "This is the first time I've seen us quit," Stogemeier said. "We expect seven innings from our starters on Tuesday and Thursday because we really don't have a strong bullpen. I hope John Moad throws better on Thursday." NOTES: The Warriors host Belleville East in a double-header today at 4:30 p.m. Moad will start the first game, which is the one that counts in the conference standings. The Lancers lost 10-7 to Belleville West in eight innings on Tuesday, while East St. Louis stopped Collinsville 4-1.

Softball

game," said Warrior coach Jim Davis. "They knew they had to do better and they answered the call. Cavanaugh was four for four and Bohnenstiel had some big hits to get things going for us in the big innings."

The third inning definitely qualifies as a big inning for the Warriors. Bequette, who nearly batted three times in in the third, led off with a triple over the leftfielder's head and scored on a Cavanaugh single that found its way between two Alton outfielders. LeVault followed with a walk and then she and Cavanaugh executed a perfect double steal.

Hill then walked and Janel Giese popped out to second. Lewis then singled, scoring LeVault and Cavanaugh. Hill aggressively tried for third and was safe while Lewis hustled into second on the throw.

Bohnenstiel followed with a single to knock Hill and to all but assure herself of a starting position in the Warrior lineup. Before it was all over with, Bequette had singled again and Cavanaugh smacked another hit, a three-run homer to put the Warriors way ahead, 18-2.

Alton picked up two runs in the fourth, while the Warriors picked up one, but the game was already decided. LeVault closed out her first victory of the season by striking out the side in the fifth. The Warriors raised their record to 2-3, 1-1 in the Southwestern Conference. Alton is 0-2 in league play and winless overall.

NOTES: Belleville West assumed the conference lead with a 1-0 win over Belleville East behind the two-hit pitching of Kim Johansen. Collinsville is also 2-0 in the league after a 2-3 win over East St. Louis in which Angie Gebhard pitched a no-hitter.

Turner

points against Livingston on Feb. 16.

Turner will play at Northern Iowa for Eldon Miller, the former coach at Ohio State who will be starting his third year as coach of the Panthers. Turner also looked at St. Louis University, Central Missouri, Tennessee-Chattanooga, Buffalo University and Nebraska Omaha, where former Madison coach Rodney Watson is now an assistant.

"I liked the academics and athletics at Northern Iowa," said Turner, an A/B+ student who will major in either business or communications. "And coach Miller is a nice man. He and his wife came down and talked to me and my mother."

Turner is also an outstanding baseball player and would consider trying to play in college if he had the chance. But now he's looking forward to basketball.

"They've got some big guys who can score," Turner said of the Panthers. "So they need someone who can get them the ball. Coach Miller stresses defense and he likes playing inside-to-man."

"I always knew Dale could play," said Devil coach Clinton Harris. "I knew it when he was a sophomore. He had to get out and prove it this year when people weren't talking about Jesse Hall anymore. And he proved he could be a leader."

"Playing with guys like Jesse and Ed was pushed me," Turner said. "I knew what to expect coming into this year after watching them as seniors."

Northern Iowa is a school of about 11,000, and Turner said it's somewhere that's not too small, but also somewhere not big enough where he can get lost.

Like the things Dale can do both on and off the court," said Lehman. "He's an excellent student and a leader in school (Turner is the student council president)."

Northern Iowa was 10-18 last year, but defeated LSU at the Bud Light Classic in Las Vegas at Christmas time.

NOTES: Ware, after two good years at Kaskaskia, will be playing at the University of Missouri-St. Louis next season. Lionel Wiley has received an academic scholarship to Illinois Wesleyan in Bloomington.

Ellis to play in McDonald's game Sunday

LaPhonso Ellis will be playing in the 11th annual McDonald's All American Game to be televised by ABC-TV this Sunday.

Ellis was one of 25 seniors from across the country picked to play in the game, one of the most coveted and respected of all high school basketball honors.

Former McDonald's All Americans include players such as Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson, Dominique Wilkins, J.R. Reid, Danny Manning and Rex Chapman.

The 6-10 Ellis averaged 23.3 points and 10.3 rebounds in leading East St. Louis Lincoln to its second straight state championship this season. He will travel to Albuquerque, N.M., as a guest of McDonald's to play in Sunday's game at "The Pit" on the campus of the University of New Mexico. The game will be broadcast live in its entirety.

The McDonald's All American Team was formed in 1977 and is selected by a committee chaired by Morgan Wootton of DeMatha

High School in Hyattsville, Md. Wootton is one of the winningest high school coaches in America.

An advisory committee headed by John Wooden, who coached 10 national championship teams at UCLA, also participates in the selection.

Proceeds from the game are donated to a local children's charity in the city where the game is played. Past games have raised more than $600,000 for Sickle Cell Anemia research, the United Negro College Fund, the establishment of a Ronald McDonald Childhood Cancer Clinic at Emory University and the Child Life Program at UCLA's Medical Center-Children's Center.

Proceeds from the 1988 game will benefit the Ronald McDonald Children's Charities and the Ronald McDonald House of Albuquerque.
